Minden asks if biker rally outgrew area

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Ride For Sight may not return to Minden next year because of concerns over protecting the new ball diamond facilities and pending construction at the arena.

Event chairman Syd Collier approached Anson, Hinton and Minden council at last Thursday's meeting to review the 1989 event and discuss the possibility of returning next year.

"I just want to see how the people here feel about it," said Collier. "We'd like to come back again."

On the June 10 weekend, Minden

'You've more than lived up to your obligations but, I make no bones about it, I have serious concerns.'

was filled with 3,700 motorcycles carrying over 5,000 riders participating in the rally. At $436,000, Minden's event raised nearly half of the $918,000 raised Canada-wide with 19 separate rallies. All of the money raised goes toward research for the eye disease retinitis pigmentosa and, as Collier says, "the money is still coming in."

But councillor Mike Maher expressed concern that the event is growing too big for Minden's Fair Grounds. A $160,000 addition of a ball diamond (including washroom facilities and a playground, which council feels should be protected), will take up space on the lower grounds which bikers have used for camping during the event.

Also, there is the possibility that construction will be underway at the Minden Arena at the time of next year's rally, so participants won't have access to those washroom facilities.

Councillor Bob Sisson said council members have to ask themselves, "has the event outgrown the area?"

Still, the fact that Ride For Sight provides good advertising which promotes the Minden area across Ontario wasn't overlooked.

Davis to get tough over hospital unit

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Harry Davis, who is organizing the lobbying campaign to force the Ministry of Health to live up to its agreement to fund the proposed continuing care unit, has received the full support of his fellow Stanhope councillors.

"I want you to support me (in my fight) to force the Ministry of Health to honour its commitment," Stanhope's reeve said at last Wednesday's council meeting. "I told (health minister) Elinor Caplan we'd fight her till the end so she's expecting it."

"We'll visit you in jail, whatever," said Councillor Eleanor Harrison. Then when Davis said Caplan was "a tough lady," Harrison responded "so we expect you to get tough with her."

Two weeks ago, Caplan was at the Haliburton Hospital where she met with a delegation of locals who are upset about the delay in funding for the new unit. It was approved in 1984 and the subsequent fundraising campaign raised more than twice its original objective, with a total of $400,000 being donated. Since then, the ministry has been stalling on giving the go-ahead for construction and Caplan now wants another study done to see if the continuing care unit is what's really needed.

In giving his report about the meeting to council, Davis said he was discouraged that only he and Barbara Dawson, the fundraising chairman, spoke out against Caplan's stance that Haliburton might not need the new unit. (Haliburton County has the highest percentage of senior citizens in the county and there are no beds for people who need long-term nursing care.)

"I was very disappointed to hear some of the people were not more vocal," said Deputy Reeve Ann Barker.

Youth injured

Four youths were injured when a Don Mills teenager lost control of the vehicle he was driving on the Harburn Road.

Ryan Newlitt, 17, was coming around the corner by the Evergreen Cemetery. The car went off the road, striking the corner of the winter vault. The accident occurred at 12:40 a.m. on Saturday.

All four occupants of the vehicle were injured and taken to the Haliburton Hospital by ambulance. Newlitt has been charged with careless driving.

The winter vault has been badly damaged.

Sewerline meeting 'reasonably positive'

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A meeting between MPP John Eakins, Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey, and business owners who want to link up with the proposed sewer line expansion was "reasonably positive," says Art Ward.

Ward, who owns Wig-a-mog Inn and is a member of the Lake Kashagawigamog Tourist Association, says there was "frank discussion" with the consultants and the planners.

"We're in a positive position to proceed (but) we're going to have to be patient," Ward said in an interview after Friday's meeting.

The plan is to extend the Haliburton sewer line out Highway 121 and along the North Kashagawigamog Lake Road to service businesses and resorts. Because the treatment plant would have more waste to purify, it would also have to be expanded. A funding arrangement has been made whereby the businesses benefiting from the expansion would pay for some of the costs.

However, the Lake Kashagawigamog Association has asked for an independent environmental assessment on the plan because its members are not satisfied with positive report given by consultants hired by the municipality.

"I don't think they have enough facts behind them to require another study," Ward says. If the resorts and businesses aren't able to hook up to a sewer line, he says "it's going to worsen the situation they think they're trying to help."

Most resorts are now on individual septic systems and the LKTA realizes this is not perfect. "We're that much closer to hurting (the lake) with the systems we have—they're just not up to scratch," Ward said.

'We're that much closer to hurting the lake with the systems we have - they're just not up to scratch.'

The LKTA is considering a policy which would require all members to have complete inspections of their septic system. Ward hopes the property owners association will also react to the problem with such positive measures.

Stanhope agrees with drawdown limit on Hawk

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Halls/Hawk Lakes Property Owners' Association request to limit the amount of water taken by the Trent Severn Waterways has been supported by Stanhope council.

The association wants to limit the vertical drop of water at the Hawk Lake dam to seven feet. Sometimes the water levels on the two Hawk Lakes drop 10 feet, making navigation between the two lakes impossible, and also forcing residents to take their boats out in early August.

In presenting a motion at last Wednesday's council meeting, Councillor Fred Gardner, a Halls Lake resident, said that while a seven foot drop was still "inconvenient, they can live with it."

Gardner said it's been calculated that a seven-foot floor on Hawk Lake would result in only a 2-inch drop on other lakes as compensation. He recognized that other lakes also want to retain as much water as possible, but "they have a serious problem on the Hawks."

"There is a problem that (a limit on how much water is drawn down) does affect other lakes," said Reeve Harry Davis, the former chairman of the Haliburton Highlands Water Levels Advisory Committee. When the Trent-Severn Waterways introduced its system of equal percentage drawdown, he thought it would be the best system because it was fair. However, he would agree to the Hawk proposal on a trial basis.

(As of last week, all lakes in the Haliburton reservoir system were at 54 per cent of their capacity. However, because of the shapes of the lakes, there may be a one-foot vertical drop on one lake, seven feet on another.)

"I'll support anything that's reasonable—I'd like to see the taps turned off," said Councillor Murray Daniels, who lives on Boshkung Lake.

Deputy-reeve Ann Barker suggested some boats have navigation problems because they are so large.

Cardiff lays charges against its former by-law officer

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Cardiff's former by-law officer has been charged with contravening the township's zoning by-law by allowing crush to be processed on his Harcourt property.

On Friday morning, Ron Mumford appeared in Lindsay court after the township charged him with contravening Section 10 of the zoning by-law.

Mumford has had a wayside pit on his property since the 1940s. Clerk-treasurer Nancy Wright-Laking says Mumford was allowed to extract gravel from the pit because it was a legal non-conforming use of the property. However, "you can take the stuff out and put it in a truck but you can't process it there," Wright-Laking says.

The township says Mumford has also expanded his operations and when by-law officer Dennis Waymouth asked Mumford to rezone his property to Extractive Industrial (M2), Mumford refused so charges were laid. A stop work order has not been issued since crushing does not fall under the by-law officer's jurisdiction.

The Siegmiller company, which is improving Highway 121, had received a permit from the Ministry of Transportation to remove and crush on Mumford's property.

The next court appearance is in March.

Accident damages vault: Shortly after before 1 a.m. Saturday morning, a car carrying four people left the Harburn Road and smashed into the winter vault at Evergreen Cemetery. The teenagers were taken to the Haliburton Hospital and the 17-year-old driver has been charged.

Ride For Sight and Minden has been successful," said Deputy Reeve Bern Berry, adding that the event's advertisements depict the township as "a welcome country atmosphere."

Collier tried to dispel fears over the size of next year's rally, saying it shouldn't get any bigger. "We got a lot of new riders from our t.v. promotion" for the event's 10th anniversary. He added that the upper campgrounds were less than half full of bikers.

"But we must think about our washroom and playground facilities," reminded Maher. "You've more than lived up to your obligations but, I make no bones about it, I have serious concerns."

Since Reeve Ray Moore and councillor Lewis Stevens were absent from the meeting, council will make its final decision on October 11, with Collier attending.

"We're caught between a rock and a hard place, and I would like to bring my concerns to the other members," said Maher.

Sounding not held this year

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Overturning a previous decision to hold a Rural Sounding despite setbacks, Cardiff council will not hold the forum until next spring.

Two weeks ago, council was informed that the sociologist who was supposed to moderate at this Saturday's Sounding was not able to attend. Council decided to proceed anyway, since it had already postponed the Sounding earlier this year. Reeve Maurice Bradley said he feared losing credibility if it was cancelled again.

But last Monday night, the Rural Sounding Committee felt "because of the resources not available to us," the meeting should be not be held. Bradley said at Saturday's council meeting.

"We really felt sad to call it off but we would not get the effect needed," Bradley said. As to losing credibility, he said "That may happen but perhaps we will be in a better position to do it efficiently (in the spring) instead of ineffectively (now)."

Takes a licking...

Three males who overturned this stolen van on Deep Bay Road last Wednesday didn't find time to turn off the engine before scurrying toward the Gull River. Although its front windshield was smashed, the back wiper was still working.

Police find leads on stolen van

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Minden OPP have identified three people who overturned a van stolen from the arena last Wednesday.

Lutterworth resident Bonnie Byrne, who witnessed the accident, says the three males escaped from the 1985 maroon Dodge Caravan after it "went flying" off of Deep Bay Road, just outside of Minden.

The van landed front first into the ditch, smashing its windshield, and the three ran across the road, tumbling down a hill toward the Gull River. One was holding out an arm as if injured, says Byrne.

"I couldn't believe they all made it out alive," she says, adding the youths "didn't even look old enough to drive."

Minden residents Wyatt Nesbitt, Chris Allaire, Johnny Black, and Rob and Dave Ackers were passing through, but found no signs of the youths after stopping to search the area.

Police now hold a warrant for the arrest of Czaba Kovacs, 19, of Minden. The other two occupants were under-age and can't be identified under the Young Offenders Act.

The van was owned by Kathy Perrott of Minden.

Hawk 7-foot floor

"If some of them would restrain from getting these great big boats," they may have an easier time docking.

One of the people present at the meeting said he has cottaged on Hawk Lake for decades and this year, the water was 20 inches higher than it was on the same date last year. He added he's seen an 11-to-12-foot drop in lake levels, and that this was an historical problem on the lakes.

Residents react to Stanhope dumps with darts and laurels

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Complaints and accolades about the condition of Stanhope dumps paint two different pictures of how residents are responding to the township's efforts to improve waste management.

"When one considers that every other municipality in the surrounding area appears to have a recycling program, it is certainly unfortunate the same has not been implemented in our township," R.J. Trafford said in a letter to council.

He also mentioned the sometimes unsightly condition of the North Shore dump, now that it has been gated and hours restricted. "The entranceway to the dump is constantly littered with garbage and is, quite frankly, an eyesore. I would request that the municipality consider either re-opening the dump at all hours of the day, or, alternatively, enter into some consideration as to how to keep the entranceway to the dump cleaner and less of an eyesore."

Council is aware of the problem and has debated whether to keep large blue bins outside the gates or not. While they could be used by people who arrive at the dump when it's closed, council doesn't want them to be seen as a surrogate dumpsite, encouraging people to not become accustomed to the new hours.

It was the staff at the Hall's Lake dump who earned praise in a letter written by Robert Oldman of Hamilton. In it, he refers to an incident when an employee would not allow a truckload of "water" from Toronto to be emptied at the site.

"I wanted to let you know how friendly, helpful and courteous the employees are," writes Oldman. "I applaud your action in preventing illegal dumping and believe that the crew at the dump add a measure not only of control, but friendly service and a smile at an otherwise distasteful (by the nature of its existence), but necessary location."

"The gentleman in charge there has helped myself and others take their garbage from their vehicles and even asked if anyone needed a particular item left discarded but which could still be used—plastic windows—while I was once there."

"I hope this service will continue and that the Hall's Lake dump will carry on into the 1990s because of its convenience to local cottagers. If the dump is ever closed, there is a concern not only of longer distances to travel, but where the bears will go if closure occurs."

The Ministry of the Environment had ordered the dump closed by this winter, but negotiations are underway to expand it, allowing it to remain open until the county completes its Waste Management Master Plan in three years.

Cars can't park at Beech landing

People who use the public boat launching ramp on Beech Lake will be reminded not to leave their cars there.

The boat launch area is on the North Shore Road, just before a turn at the road by the Ferguson farm. Some cars, including Ministry of Natural Resources vehicles, have been parked by the side of the road after people have launched their boat and left by lake.

Stanhope council feels this makes for a dangerous situation and will erect signs at the site telling people not to park there. The nearest available parking is at the township office, less than a kilometre from the ramp.

Prize encouragement: The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Health Unit is using a draw as an incentive to get seniors to receive an influenza shot from their doctors. Seniors' immune systems are weakened with age and they are susceptible to infections. The 'flu can be deadly if it develops into pneumonia, and the vaccine is free. Here, public health nurse supervisor Mary Lou Mills and local public health nurse Jean Tyler show display.

Seniors encouraged to get protection from influenza

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Banded about as if it described something as harmless as the common cold, the 'flu has come to mean a time of upset stomachs, fever and a quick recovery. But that's only served to mask its deadly qualities.

"When people get older, their immune system doesn't work as well," says Mary Lou Mills, supervisor of public health nurses for the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Health Unit. "Therefore, they can't fight off infection and disease the way they used to."

Influenza can leave sufferers sick and weak for six to eight weeks. It also makes the person susceptible to other infections, such as pneumonia, which kills quite a number of senior citizens. An estimated 2,000 Canadians die each year from influenza complications.

"It's better to prevent it than suffer the consequences," says Mills.

The health unit's ounce of prevention is an annual "flu shot", given to seniors in the fall to prevent them from getting the 'flu in the winter. Because the influenza bacteria change very rapidly, new vaccines are developed every year, so new shots are required as well.

"It's a good thing," says Minden's Allan Stott, who along with his wife, Helen, has been getting a 'flu shot for the past 15 years. "We believe in it. It prevents us from getting the 'flu, even colds."

When the Stotts first received the shot from their doctor, they had to pay for it, but now that they're older than 65, they get it for free.

Many seniors don't get the shot because it used to have painful side effects, says Mills. But now, with advances in the vaccine, only people who have true allergies—hives, not an upset stomach—to eggs are advised not to get it because there may be minute traces of egg protein in the vaccine.

"Even when it was a problem, we took it and now they've got it down to a science," says Stott. His wife's arm is sore for a day or two, but he's had no side effects.

Another reason why people don't get the shot is "they don't think they'll get sick at all," says Mills. As they get older, however, the chances of being wrong increase and now the shot is recommended for anyone older than 65. People who work with sick people are also encouraged to get it.

To help spread the message about the vaccine's importance, and why people should ask their doctor to immunize them, local public health nurses such as Jean Tyler have been speaking at seniors' club meetings.

"People have responded very well," Tyler says. The nurses are scheduled to speak at 46 gatherings.

The unit has added another incentive to people who hear the speech about the vaccine and then fill out a survey. A draw from the names of those completing the survey will be held on October 27. The prizes are: a microwave from Moynes Furniture; $50 gift certificates from Home Hardware and Paulette's; Chris Bishop's Haliburton Highlands book from The Nook; a $25 Country Rose gift certificate; and a $10 Nancy's Flowers gift certificate.

Anyone who wants to receive the shot, or has any concerns about it, should contact their doctor.

Cardiff uses stronghold against wetland abusers

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Development of wetlands property will not be allowed in Cardiff Township until the new wetlands by-law is completed.

Deputy-reeve Keith Murphy, who is also chairman of the environment committee, proposed an interim by-law to be used until the more comprehensive by-law is ready. Council passed a similar by-law before its lake quality study was completed.

In the meantime, council will stick with its Sept. 7 decision not to allow Garth Clark to drain a swamp on his property.

Clark made another presentation to council on Saturday, stating in writing his belief that draining the swamp would not have an adverse effect on the environment. He objected to not being invited to the environment committee meeting when the matter was discussed and says "I'm not in the least bit confident that the discussions which took place are valid."

A biologist, hired by the township to investigate such matters, advised that the swamp was ecologically viable and there was no reason to drain it. Council suggested Clark meet with the biologist, but Clark said he already had. The biologist made a personal recommendation, saying it would be now be a political decision, Clark said. "I think the political decision has been taken and I find it unacceptable."

"... You're saying there's no rationale for changing it for the sake of the wetlands itself. I'd suggest that on that basis it would change the ecology, then anywhere in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans" there are also ecological habitats. "The difference is, no one pays taxes on it (the ocean)."

When Clark said not being able to drain the swamp affected "the quiet enjoyment of my property," Murphy questioned how this was so. Clark replied quiet enjoyment was a legal term and Murphy would have to ask a lawyer for the answer.

Reeve Maurice Bradley said Clark was aware of the swamp when he purchased the land. Clark said he was also aware the land was not as severely flooded before the township fixed the Dyno Road several years ago. The swamp, therefore, was "obviously artificial."

Gelert residents oppose zoning; could go to OMB

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Gelert residents are objecting to a proposed salvage company to be built on County Road 1.

Last Monday night, approximately 30 people attended a meeting about Bill Linnington's re-zoning application. The 21-acre property, between Gelert Gardens and the municipal road, is in a residential area.

Reeve George Simmons says Linnington's plan is to build a garage and two houses facing onto the county road, and then store cars and trucks at the back of the lot, selling useable parts from there. Once Linnington has collected 300 vehicles, Simmons says a company will pick them up to take them to a compressing yard.

However, a petition against the proposal has been circulated and if Snowdon council approves the re-zoning, an Ontario Municipal Board hearing will probably be necessary to settle the dispute.

"Very simply, when all the surrounding residents say no to something, I think they should stop it. This is where we live," says Dalton Russell, who organized the petition. He says he received support from more than 100 people.

"No one is against change or business as long as it's something which suits the area," Russell says, and he thinks a salvage yard is out of place in a residential area which is in part, dependent upon tourism.

Russell says he also has environmental concerns. A creek at one end of the property runs into the Drag River, and he's worried about pollution of the water system. Neighbouring property values will decline as well, he says.

The matter will be discussed at the October 2 Snowdon council meeting.

Toronto teen drowns

A Toronto teenager drowned in Gull Lake early Saturday morning when the canoe he was paddling over-turned.

Mark Christopher Gort, was out with two friends at 3:30 a.m. When the canoe capsized, the two companions made it safely to shore and reported Gort missing.

The body was recovered at 8:45 and ambulance attendants commenced CPR as they travelled to the Minden Hospital and then Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay, where Gort was pronounced dead.

Hwy. 35 accident fatal

After a fatal accident on Highway 35 just south of the Haliburton/Victoria border, a Toronto man has been charged with impaired operation of a vehicle causing the death of his wife.

On Saturday at approximately 3:00 p.m., Craig Barker, 29, lost control of the vehicle he was operating. The car crossed into the south-bound lane, where it was hit by a vehicle operated by William Elms, 69, of Toronto.

Barker's 29-year-old wife, Christine was killed in the accident, and Elms and his passenger, Robert Elms, 36 of Ottawa, were taken by ambulance to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay.

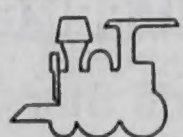

The Minden OPP is investigating the accident and says more charges are pending. Barker is remanded in custody.

Cardiff displeased with drained dam

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A couple who had been asked to explain to Cardiff council why they had partially dismantled a beaver dam, did not appear at Saturday's council meeting.

Thomas Baker and his wife own recreational property between Joe Bay on Paudash Lake and Highway 28. A creek runs between Joe Bay and Anderson Lake on the other side of the Highway, and a beaver dam was partly responsible for creating a swamp on the property.

Deputy-reeve Keith Murphy says the Bakers want to access their property from the highway because no access is allowed off the South Paudash Lake Road. They would need a causeway through the swamp. There is a beaver dam a neighbour's property and Murphy says the Bakers asked for and received permission from the neighbour to dismantle the dam in order to drain their property.

However, when the water was let loose, "the water coming down stream increased immensely and the culvert (on the Paudash road) wasn't able to retain it," Murphy says.

Now there is some damage around the culvert area and the water is still being improperly drained, causing erosion.

"They obviously can't break a dam if it will cause damage to other people's property," Murphy says. "We asked the Bakers to attend Saturday's meeting to clarify their intentions."

When the Bakers didn't show up at the appointed time, Murphy referred to a comment the Bakers had made to clerk-treasurer Nancy Wright-Laking, when she told them of council's request they attend the meeting.

"They said they wanted to have someone higher up from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs to also attend the meeting because they didn't want to talk to little people with little minds," Wright-Laking says.

Council passed a motion stating its displeasure with the Bakers.

Terry Grant of Haliburton is also still in jail after he was charged with two counts of trafficking a narcotic.

Nick and Patricia George of Kinmount, who face several drug and firearm charges have been released on bail: $160,000 for Mr. George and $77,000 for Mrs. George.

Advice sought on subdivision

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Cardiff council will seek legal advice about a rather complicated residential development.

In 1967, Walter Babor received approval from the council at the time to build a subdivision on Part Lot 29, Concession 19. Babor would convey two lots to the township, plus a road with one-foot reserves, which would allow the municipality to control exits onto the roadway. Approval was granted provided Babor submit it to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs as a plan of subdivision.

The deeded land was one of the stipulations imposed by the ministry.

The Planning Act states developers must grant five percent of the land for public purposes and the ministry specified this by saying the land must provide access to Jordan Lake.

Today, the lots have been sold and some cottages built. However, council believes Babor has yet to register it as a plan of subdivision.

A lawyer acting on behalf of a couple who has just purchased one of the lots has recently sent a letter to council, asking for written assurance that the municipality will retain its lots.

"May we suggest that a document be registered in the Registry Office verifying that the said lots are reserved for access to the lake in order that future buyers on the plan will know they have an access to the lake," wrote lawyer Walter Howell.

The council which didn't ensure the plan was registered "accepted things they shouldn't have done," said Councillor Mack Peters. "It's going to be a hornet's nest."

"Do we have the two lots? Do we have legal title," asked Councillor Keith Murphy.

"There's nothing clear on this one, it's really muddy," said Reeve Maurice Bradley. "What is the legal position? Are we bound to accept it because there have been cottages built?"

Legal advice is being sought.

New Cardiff fee structure introduced

A fire department in Cardiff may not become a reality until 1990, but with 27 willing volunteers and a shiny new red truck, it seems the township is on its way.

Volunteers have been undergoing training with a qualified instructor for the past few weeks in order to work toward providing fire protection services which were previously supplied by Bicroft, Monmouth and Burleigh/Anstruther.

Deputy Reeve Keith Murphy says the township wants to meet provincial regulations for a fire department, including the acquisition of a fire truck and pump, and a minimum of 17 trained volunteers.

"We had the fire marshal come in to speak with council, and called on any interested people to volunteer. This year council was able to budget accordingly to purchase our own truck without creating a deficit—there will be no extra strain on the taxpayer."

Murphy says response from residents has been positive. "They're pleased to see us working toward becoming a progressive township, getting services built up for the development which is inevitably going to occur in the area."

"Our council is trying to become extremely responsive to the people's needs."

Peterborough garbage not wanted

No, no, no.

It did not take Stanhope council long to respond to a request from the city of Peterborough. Would Stanhope be willing to receive some or all of Peterborough's non-hazardous and non-liquid industrial waste disposal?

before the wetlands study is completed," Councillor Mack Peters said. If council didn't follow the advice of the biologist, "it's like hiring a consultant to draw up a plan and not agreeing with it."

"My advice to you is if you're not happy, you take the appropriate action," Bradley told Clark.

"That was the point of putting it in writing so I can proceed," Clark replied, holding up a letter stating his objections.

If people don't volunteer, Guilford may lose centre

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Faced with a desperate shortage of volunteers, the future of the West Guilford Community Centre is on the brink.

Nominations for the executive committee take place at the centre tonight (Wednesday) at 7:30, and vice-president Carol Stamp is urging more residents to get involved.

"The municipality owns the building, but it's the people here who have to run it," says Stamp. "If we can't do the job, the municipality will take the building back and sell it. We don't want that to happen."

A total of 20 volunteers would be ideal to keep the centre going, she says. People are needed for the bingo, dance, and executive committees.

"We've tried to get a different caller for every night of bingo, but it's difficult," says Stamp. "We have two, but we really need four callers since we hold bingo every Monday night."

"It's difficult to get volunteers these days. Every organization is the same—a few do all the work."

If the centre lacks volunteers, it will have to close down, and the community will lose other services provided by the centre's committee, such as the ball diamond. "Even the docks at the beach are maintained by the centre. Hundreds of people use that beach, but it wouldn't be there any longer if we lose the centre."

It takes a lot of help to organize the area's main events, such as the Canada Day celebration and the Snow Shuffle in the winter. But it's getting more and more difficult to find volunteers.

"The younger generation doesn't seem to be interested in helping out," says Stamp. "I don't know why it is, but they're all too busy. And now it seems there are so many activities available for the seniors that they don't have time either."

Even finding paid help is tough, available anymore if people don't get involved."

Stamp says it's time for new ideas that new people on the committees could provide. She would like to see more activities at the centre.

"At one time we had a playschool for the little ones and several crafts programs. We even used to have euchre parties. Seniors could be using that building constantly. There's lots of space there, and we hate to see it sit idle."

Anyone who wants to be

"We often get a lot of flack about how we should run the centre. Now it's time for those who want changes to give it a try. It would be a shame to see the centre close down."

because the centre committee can only afford to hire part-time caretakers.

"To keep our finances up we rent the centre out for anniversary parties and dances. But it's hard to raise money through the bingo and dances. Nobody's coming out for the dances, anymore."

The centre is offered free for congregations when there's been a death in the community, as well as for bridal showers. "Little things like that mean a lot, but they won't be nominated, but can't attend, is invited to phone ahead. Everyone is welcome to share ideas at tonight's gathering.

"We often get a lot of flack from people in the community about how we should run the centre. It's really hard—you try and do your best, but sometimes that's not good enough."

"Now it's time for those who want changes to give it a try. It would be a shame to see the centre close down."

New Cardiff fee structure introduced

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A new building fee structure for commercial and industrial enterprises was introduced by Cardiff council on Saturday to ensure developers aren't penalized for constructing larger buildings.

Chief building inspector Dennis Waymouth raised the issue when he realized that with the present fee structure of 15 cents per square inch, someone building a storage rental building would be charged $945. Waymouth felt this was too high because inspecting the simple structure will not be time consuming, as would inspecting a multi-use building of the same size.

"We're not out of line for the average home (fee)," said Reeve Maurice Bradley, who wanted to create a new type of fee rather than lower the present fee for homes and cottages. All fees would be primarily based on a per-square-foot basis.

"You can get to the point where you could drive people away" if the rates were too high, said Councillor Mack Peters. He proposed a sliding scale with a maximum.

"We have to be very careful because industrial is where we will create jobs for our people and we don't want to discourage it," agreed Bradley. However, he was against other urban municipalities' tendencies to give too many breaks to business. Business development shouldn't be done "on the backs of the people."

Council realized you could have a large building without extensive wiring and plumbing, such as the storage building, while another building of the same size could be more complex and require more inspections.

"I don't know how you foresee everything that will happen—we're growing," said Waymouth.

The municipal planner will be consulted to devise a more complex fee structure, which will charge a maximum fee of $500 plus other fees based on the type of work involved.

A strong voice

Stanhope Township reeve Harry Davis is spearheading a campaign he hopes will send a strong message to the government of Ontario — a message that says Haliburton Hospital's continuing care addition is an absolute priority in the community, and that the government has an obligation to live up to the commitment it made three years ago to fund it. Davis and other people who believe in the importance of the cause have sponsored a full page advertisement in this week's Echo, and they're asking people to clip the page, sign it and send it to MPP John Eakins as evidence of how deeply the community resents the endless delays and the government's demand for yet another study.

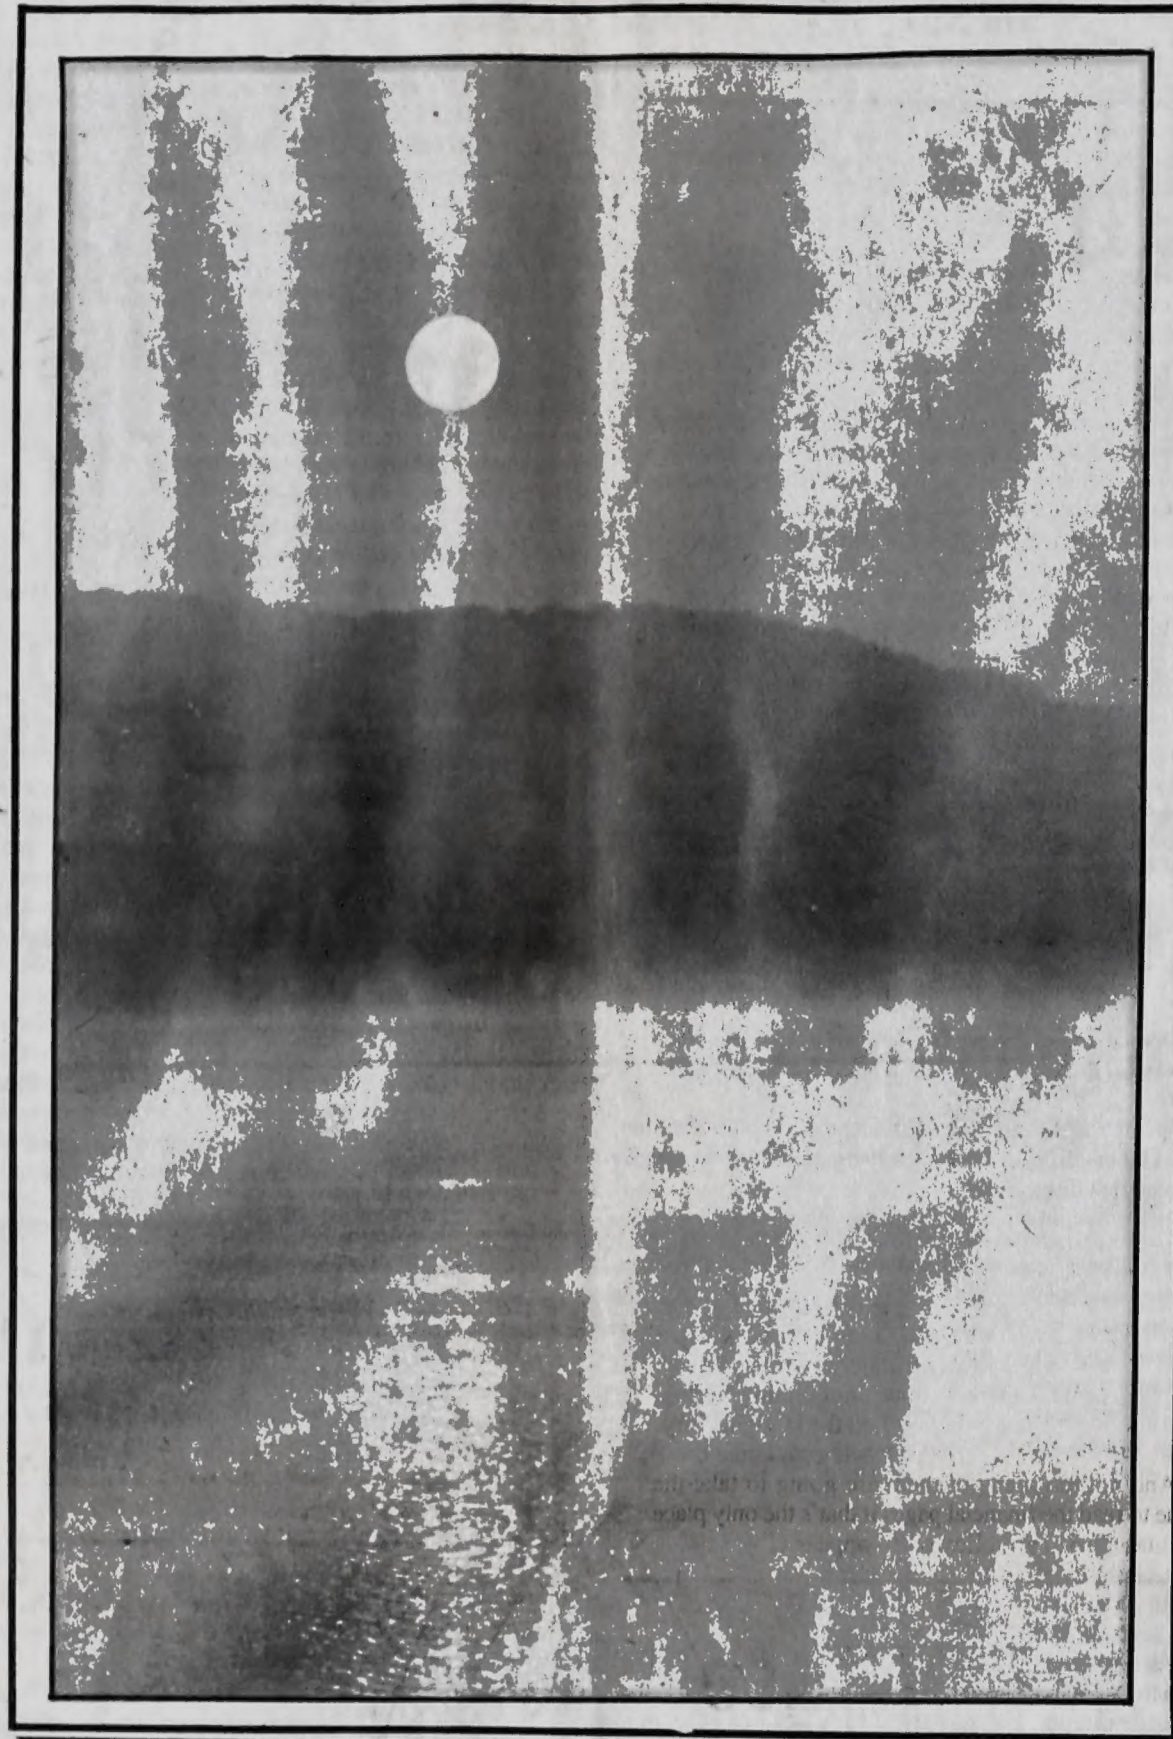

It would be wrong to view the community's anger as evidence of selfishness, or a lack of understanding about the challenges facing the Ontario health care system and minister Elinor Caplan. The health care system has become an insatiable monster that threatens to consume dollars faster than the government can dream up new ways to grab them from beleaguered taxpayers. Health care spending reached more than $12.6 billion last year, eating up one in every three dollars raised by all forms of Ontario taxation. The cost of handing out prescription drugs under universal schemes rose 20 percent last year, to nearly $600 million. Unless major changes are implemented, both in attitudes and in programmes, health care costs in Ontario will soon outstrip the economy's ability to meet them. The government knows this, and is trying to find solutions which the voters will accept. So far, however it has shied away from measures that might be hard for the majority of voters to swallow, conditioned as they are to expect the best of everything under the illusion that it's free. In fact, the present government has bolstered that illusion by opting to fund health care through an employer payroll tax. The measure will hurt small business and may cost jobs, but its worst aspect is that it will enable the government to avoid taking potentially unpopular but necessary steps to trim health care expenditures. As long as the government can keep jacking up the payroll tax, it won't face up to other options, which include a modest user fee, a credit card system to discourage unscrupulous billing and inform people how much the care they received actually cost, and an end to universal drug benefits, requiring people to pay a reasonable portion of drug costs based on their income, not their age.

Faced with the daunting reality of these rising costs and a responsibility to do something about them, it is not surprising that health minister Elinor Caplan should seek to delay the Haliburton Hospital expansion project. Haliburton County is, after all, a relatively small and out-of-the-way corner of Ontario, and no party's political fortunes are determined by local opinions. And so Caplan has offered not a quick start to the hospital expansion, but another study, another delay.

It makes sense to ensure that a community's health care delivery system is as efficient as possible. It makes sense to establish priorities and to keep costs down. But when all is said and done, when all the consultants have been paid and all the pieces of paper have been shuffled, the facts that are abundantly clear to the people of Haliburton County will not have changed. No matter how effective the health care system may be at keeping people in their homes when they grow old, no matter how sophisticated the medical profession may be at treating serious illness, ultimately, a certain number of people grow ill enough to need chronic care. In 1985 the District Health Council said Haliburton County needed 18 chronic care beds, and four years later, that demand has not gone down.

That is the message that Harry Davis and others are asking the community to send to Elinor Caplan and the Ontario government. The proposed addition to Haliburton Hospital is not an extravagance. It is not empire building or anyone's dream of self-aggrandizement. It is, plainly and simply, a community need that the community has worked long and hard to meet. The people of Haliburton County have met their commitment to the hospital project. It is time for the government to do the same. If you share that view, sign your name to page 16 and mail it to John Eakins or Elinor Caplan.

Paper a refreshing glimpse of life

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

Through friends in Ingoldsby I "met" The Echo last year and we are subscribers now. Every week I am looking forward to receiving our copy in the mail.

We live in Brampton, support all nature and wildlife preservation, and are concerned about our environment. We live very close to a beautiful little forest with lots of wildlife — kind of a last part of sanity in a fast growing suburbia.

We follow everything that is con/for in The Echo about nature and the lakes and are very impressed by the caring tone of your paper — gentle as an echo.

At first we were drawn to it by Bob Giuliano's columns, and since have also much enjoyed the writings of Martha Perkins, Harvey Clarke, Len Pizze (a very informative piece about the running of a paper) and others. Martha Perkins' style of writing, of reporting, her sensitivity, graciousness, and integrity, and beautiful language are inspiring, and bring hope into an often dark world. Thank you!

When we were visiting with friends this summer we followed one of her suggested country roads to Buttermilk Falls. What breathtaking sight and sound!

I enclose a very small item. It's a little poem. I came upon in a German publication the other day. I translated it and hope the mood is still the same as intended by the author. The poet, Edward Moerike, lived and wrote in a south western region of Germany, Schwaben (also called Baden) in the last century. His language is simple and honest, but effective; his poems, prose writings and fairy tales are well known and loved — and taught at German highschools.

September morning.
Mist still covers a quiet world,
Field and forest dreaming;
Soon you see—as the veil is lifting
Blue skies, cloudless,
And a mellow world
Flowing in autumn's warmest gold.

You needn't be born here to belong

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

Martha Perkins

UP UNTIL 10 YEARS AGO, there was a lot of truth, and a fair amount of bitterness, in the statement "I've been here 40 years and I'm still considered an outsider." There was a type of village snobbery, an elitism which let people who weren't born here know that this somehow made them not worthy of the full Haliburtonian title. It was a badge to be worn by only the blue blood of rural fiefdoms.

One woman even told me that the Curry family, who are now on their fourth generation of Haliburtonians, were really just upstarts from Glamorgan. You can laugh now, but Harry Finlay was given a hard time by his fellow Tory Hillians when his new bride Margaret wanted a bathtub in her new home. Ah, these city women with all their high falutin' ways.

I'm going to borrow a term from the Newfoundlanders when instead of "outsiders", I'll say these new people are "from away." In Newfoundland, away was invariably the mainland, but in Haliburton County, it's usually "The City." (The stretch linking Oshawa, Toronto and Hamilton makes these communities seem indiscernible from one another.)

But the times they are a changing, perhaps much to the chagrin of those who want some reason to hold themselves above those from away. There might still be a conspiracy against those not born

THE DUCK FAMILY that swims up and down the Drag River in Haliburton seems to be getting bigger and although many of the local citizens as well as visitors keep feeding them on a hit-and-miss basis, it takes some person to look after them each and every day. Some people such as Art Ouellette and others feed them on a daily basis, week in and week out.

Property, houses and businesses in Haliburton and Minden are still moving at a good pace even though it seems that the real estate market is not quite as buoyant as it was a year ago. When you look around Minden and Haliburton and other villages in the County, you will notice many new businesses and houses are under construction.

"We are going to have a tough time cleaning up the environment if people continue to pollute our waters and litter our highways and parks. It was brought to my attention just the other day that someone from the West Guilford area reported that they had seen someone drive a 4-wheel-drive pickup into Cranberry Lake. You can just imagine the amount of oil and grease from the truck that would be left in the lake."

Driving past the West Guilford dump one day last week I thought they would have to declare the area in front of the gates a disaster area. It appears that when people arrive at the dump and the gates are closed they just leave the garbage in front of the gate. A person who came by last week told me that the garbage was strewn all over the area from the gate down and across the highway. It's possibly time to bring back the big blue containers to solve this problem.

Our congratulations go out to Frank and Ruth Parkes who reside at Outlet Bay near Haliburton. They celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary on September 4. They are well known in the area and are very active members in the community, especially with the Senior Citizens Club and St. George's Anglican Church.

Just a few notes: Harry Brohm of Haliburton is vacationing in Nova Scotia... John Eakins MPP, was the guest speaker at the Haliburton Rotary Club meeting last Thursday evening... We are glad to see Rex Boice up and around after spending a month in hospital... Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler of Springfield, Mass. were visitors to the village last week... When you walk up and down the main streets in both Minden and Haliburton a familiar sight is the Help Wanted signs in most store windows.

According to an article in the latest edition of The Hockey News, going into this season, Bernie Nicholls has a bit of a problem—what to do for an encore. The Los Angeles Kings' centre enjoyed the best season of his career last year, shattering the team record for goals in a season with 70. His 80 assists gave him 150 points on the season, also a team record of most points by any King not named Wayne Gretzky. The 28-year-old Nicholls cashed in on his performance in June when he signed a five-year, $3.6 million contract. Despite becoming a member of the swelling millionaires club with the Kings, Nicholls insists he doesn't feel pressured. "I don't feel I have to score 70 goals again to justify (the contract)," he said. "As long as I have a good year and the team does well, that will be satisfying enough. Certainly I feel that I should score 50 if I stay healthy, but a lot of times, even if the numbers aren't there, you can still have a successful season." Nicholls, with 300 goals, 383 assists in 555 NHL games, dipped to a five-year low of 78 points in 1987-88 before rebounding. "I've scored a lot of goals during my career, but I have more pride in the fact that I think I've developed into a good, all around player," said Nicholls, entering his seventh full season with the Kings. Bernie went on to say that with goalie Kelly Hrudey and defenceman Larry Robinson in the line-up the team will be much stronger. He said making the play-offs last year was a lot of fun. "I think winning becomes more important as you get older. When you're younger, just being in the NHL is a thrill. But that wears out. When you don't win, the games becomes more of a job." Nicholls feels that the team should be a contender for first place overall. "We expect good things to happen and I think other people expect the same thing from us. That's a pleasant change."

Getting back to the local hockey scene, the invitations are out for all men who are interested in playing in the Haliburton Men's Hockey League to contact Chris Hodgson at 457-2010 or Drew Carey, 457-3124 before September 25. You must sign up to be eligible to play.

We have just been informed that the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario is extending a warm welcome to anyone interested in forming a steering Committee to promote the work of the Foundation in the village of Haliburton. A meeting will be held this Thursday, September 21 at 1:30 PM at the Home Support Services, Drag River Municipal Building

Oprah scandal sparks questions

Clarke

I HAVE BEEN amused by commentary in the Toronto Star, viewing with alarm what they feel is a trend towards deception and less-than-objective journalism in the U.S., where TV networks are providing videotaped 're-enactments' in cases where they have been unable to cover actual events.

But the example that seems to have had the most publicity was the recent cover of TV Guide that featured a drawing of Oprah Winfrey — the new, slimmer version — posing in a glamorous gown. It was the gown, in fact, that blew the lid off the story.

The designer of the dress recognized it as one of his own creations — produced ten years before for actress Ann-Margaret — and used in a group of her publicity stills.

Now it turns out that the artist who drew the illustration did what thousands of them have done for years. When he needed a body for a drawing, he just checked through his 'swipe' file and found what he needed.

An art director I worked with in the 40s had accumulated a four-drawer file chock full of 'reference work' — which is the formal name for a swipe file — during his lifetime, and it was all filed carefully by categories — hands, feet, faces, hair styles, and so on.

He had sections for people running, standing, sitting, dancing, playing baseball, football, hockey — you name it. When he had to do an illustration in a hurry for an ad, he propped up a couple of examples of similar stuff from the file above his drawing board and then drew his own version, using the reference as his guide.

That, of course, is where the TV Guide cover illustration went wrong. He used a famous picture of a famous lady with a famous body — wearing a famous dress by a famous designer — and he didn't put enough of his own creativity into it.

What amused me most, however, wasn't so much the story of the artist who the Star says 'duped, fooled, bamboozled, tricked (and) deceived' us. It was the fact that it ran on the page of the paper opposite their editorial page.

Because I find the Toronto Star, more than most, willing to let editorial positions spill over into their news coverage of any subject they chose to champion. I have kept a 'Letter to the Editor' from November 16, 1987 pinned up on the bulletin board above my desk, because I felt it was so perceptive. A reader, one S. J. Landry, wrote in connection with the daily barrage of slanted coverage at that time about free trade.

She concluded: "End the masquerade. The Star is not an objective city newspaper — it's a political party."

In those days the Sky Was Falling over Free Trade, and today we are getting reams of obfuscating Chicken Little material about the GST.

Obviously, there are many bad points about the Goods and Services Tax, and probably quite a few good ones. No one likes taxes to begin with, and it is obvious that most people don't grasp the fact that for much of their purchases the 9 percent tax will represent a reduction from what they are now paying.

I listened to a representative of a race track (now there's an essential service!), lamenting the fact that the poor horse breeders will have to pay 9 percent taxes on their harnesses, among other items, and this would mean that half of Ontario's race tracks would just have to close down the instant the tax came into effect.

He apparently has no idea that his beloved breeders are paying 13.5 percent tax on harnesses now, and it will actually be cut to 9 percent by the GST. But he won't find that in the news pages — or the commentaries, or Gary Lautens' biting witty columns on the subject, or even the Letters to the Editor section of the Toronto Star.

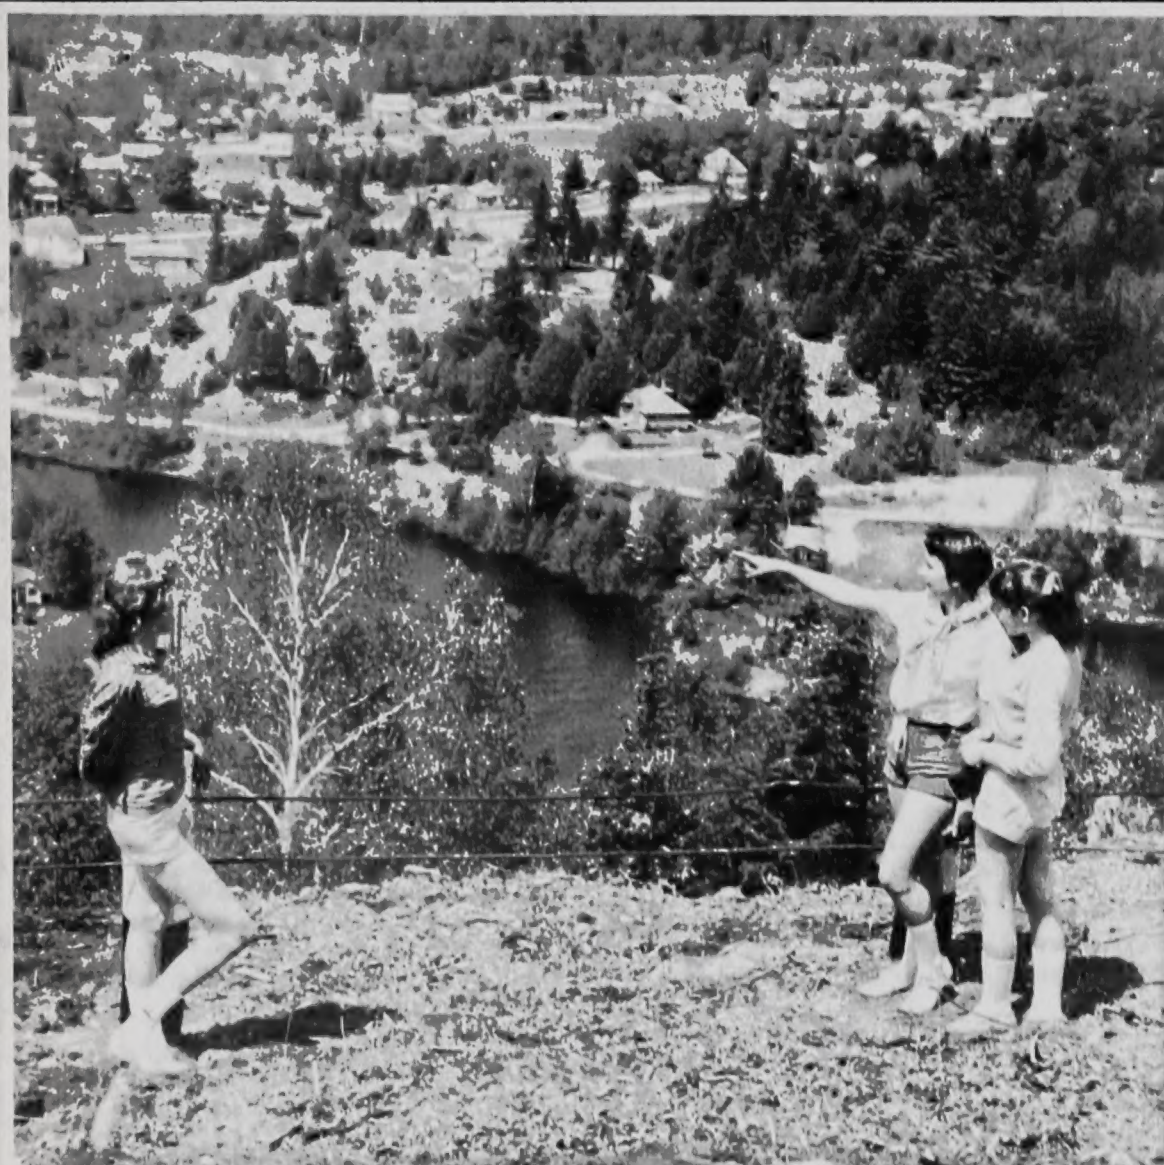

I think the most courageous person on the paper at this point has to be Jack McArthur, their Financial Editor. I don't know if it is because he is such a highly respected journalist, or he is reaching retirement age and doesn't give a damn, or is just that secure in his belief that saying what he believes is right is more important than anything else — but he has had the guts to reject the paper's 'party line' and tell it like it is.

He says that a system based on taxing on manufactured products is a throwback to the days when people bought mostly things, yet we are now a country that spends more on services.

His example of a service, by the way is the 3 million tickets sold to see the Blue Jays play in the Dome — not the heart-tuggers usually presented, like the cost of a funeral or a child's music lessons.

It's a little soon to tell how much is right with the GST as compared to what may be wrong with it, but the public is going to have a tough time sorting it out if they have trouble finding the straight story, with facts on which to base their opinions.

And not too many of them are going to take the time to read the financial pages if that's the only place factual stories are allowed to appear...

Pic of the Past

Now that Autumn is beginning to put on its spectacular show of colours, we thought this a good time to share this picture taken when Skyline Park in Haliburton was first being developed. The park, located off Highway 121 on the way to Tory Hill, has a panoramic view of the village, Head Lake and the surrounding rolling hills. For other tour suggestions, please see our Fall Tour supplement in this week's issue.

OFF THE RECORD

Everybody's got something to hide, except for me and my monkey... — John Lennon

FROM THE OUTSIDE, Norm and Lou Weber's barn looks quite normal. Beyond the red door a few chickens, bales of hay, and the shadow of Velvet the horse can be seen.

But look up...w-a-y up, and you'll see tiny, sharp eyes shining from the rafters, blinking away the dust and darting in the darkness. The eyes move closer and the lines of a face appear. Moving toward you is no ordinary barn inhabitant...this is a monkey.

When the Webers first acquired George (named by sons Max and Andre after the curious monkey from children's books) they didn't want to tell too many people. After all, a monkey isn't a typical pet, especially in Gelert where cows and horses dominate most barns.

Before visiting Lou Weber last week to talk about George, I really didn't know what to expect. After briefly hearing about George, I was curious to know why on earth anyone out here would own a monkey.

Although I did go through a stage of begging for a monkey while growing up, I couldn't help but wonder what attraction a monkey would hold for an adult. I pictured a trained, but not-too-clean chimpanzee, wearing shorts and a cap, and tearing through the living room.

While talking with Mrs. Weber, I realized that she is a nice, polite and, indeed, sane person. But it wasn't until I finally saw George—an exotic, pint-sized squirrel monkey with a small, dark face and yellow-furred body—that I discovered just how charming a creature a monkey can be.

After George first appeared from the depths of the barn, I let out a gasp. Moving in long, careful strides and gentle leaps, George is strange to see and fascinating to watch.

Long-fingered (footed?) paws—like pint-sized hands with tiny fingernails—carefully hold nuts or pieces of fruit, which he turns and nibbles on for breakfast. After moving into a dusty area, his tiny nose crinkles with each sneeze. And sharp teeth sparkle when his mouth opens for a wide yawn.

George lives in the barn, but often ventures out to the Webers' greenhouse. Crouched amongst the leaves and vines, George makes the greenhouse look more like a jungle in the tropics. He curls up, nose nestled in his long tail, and sleeps in the warmth of the sun.

I suppose monkeys hold our interest because they are so much more similar to humans than other creatures, not only through their intelligence, but also with their physical appearance. (Although, Mrs. Weber doesn't put little clothes on George to make him look like a person, she is considering the acquisition of a cap and sweater to keep him warm in the coming winter months.)

When friends, family and neighbours first heard about George, each reacted with disbelief (and probably questioned the sanity of the Webers). Now that they know George, he has become the toast of the town. Some offer gifts of fruit and nuts when visiting, and head straight for the barn before even seeing the family.

George has charmed his way into even the most skeptical hearts. For Lou Weber, there's nothing to hide.

The slippery finger of fate

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon

HARRY WAS ALL READY. He'd put on his Sunday suit, Sunday shoes and best felt hat.

His hair was clean and parted neatly down the middle and he'd even slicked it down with that stuff that came in a tube. It felt like lard but women were supposed to like it. Checking himself for the tenth time in the mirror that hung on the nail by the wash basin, he determined he looked as good as he was going to. He tapped his pant pocket and felt the small box just to make sure it was still there. It was, so he opened the door and started the long walk to Fort Irwin.

Nellie was all a flutter. Last week after Sunday church, Harry arranged to meet her on the Fort Irwin bridge at 3 o'clock the following Saturday. It was not like Harry to be so bold. True, she had known him for two years now, but they'd only been courting for half that time. They had gone to church socials, dances and picnics together, but there had always been other people around. It had taken some time for the two of them to overcome their shy natures enough to really feel at ease. After all, they were of the opposite sex and Nellie had always been a bit scared of men. She could tell Harry was terrified of most women. Except her. But for him to ask her to meet him on the bridge 'by yourself' had set her heart pounding, head twirling and stomach churning. Could something be wrong? Something so terrible that he didn't want anyone else to know? All week she had wondered and worried and today she would find out.

It was good walking weather. The sun was warm without being hot and the trees were just starting to turn. Not a cloud could be seen in the sky and Harry took this as a good omen. Unfortunately, it being Saturday, there was a lot of traffic on the road and every time a buggy or wagon went by it stirred up the dust something awful. "Sorry Harry", shouted a driver as he sent a cloud Harry's way. Harry waved in good natured reply and kept on walking. He didn't want to be late.

Nellie kept her eye on the mantle clock as she finished a cup of tea. It was almost time. If she didn't rush it should take fifteen minutes to reach the bridge. She checked the mirror and gave her hair one more pat in place. It was thick, chestnut colour and she wore it up as was the fashion. Throwing a warm shawl over her shoulders, she headed out.

He saw her standing there as the bridge came into sight and checked his pocket watch. No, he wasn't late, she had been watching the road but when she saw him, she turned to face the water. Harry wasn't sure what this might mean, if anything, but he picked up his pace.

As soon as Nellie saw him in his Sunday suit, she felt her knees go weak. It was either good news or bad news, but whatever the reason Harry had asked to meet her, she knew it was a serious matter. He only wore his Sunday suit to church, wedding and funerals.

"Good day Nellie," Harry said, approaching the spot where she stood, one hand resting on the bridge. She looked up into his somewhat dusty face with the laughing eyes.

"Good day Harry," she answered, wondering why those eyes were not laughing as they usually did. But she said nothing about this and began a conversation on what a glorious fall day it was. He agreed it was indeed a fine day and described the dust he had to contend with, hoping this would excuse what he knew must be a powdery appearance on his part.

The weather out of the way, there was a slight pause in the conversation, while Nellie mentally thrashed about for another topic to fill the void. Before she had a chance, Harry had taken her hand in his and with his other was fumbling around in his pocket. She was quite taken aback but before she could say anything except, "Why Harry..." she realized he was proposing to her.

There in his hand was a small jeweler's box which he was offering her to open. Inside, nestled on satin, was a gold ring with three tiny diamonds set in a row. The silence as she looked in surprise at this treasure, was like the din of a thousand battlefields to Harry's ears.

As she gazed at the ring Nellie was thinking not of it but of the first time she had seen Harry. He had been one of the men working of her father and had appeared one day at the door questioning a discrepancy in his pay. She had answered the door and been struck at the time by his tall good looks and clear blue eyes. Her father had said later that he admired a man who wasn't afraid to stick up for himself, for Harry had been right, there had been money owed him.

Moving her eyes from the ring to Harry's now worried face, she smiled shyly and told him she'd be proud to wear it. His heart soared. If anyone could have seen it at that moment they would have watched a rocket zoom straight up over Haliburton Lake, headed for Mars, he was that happy. Looking down at her smiling lips, he remembered in a flash the first time he had seen that mouth. It had been when he came to the door of her father's house, nervous but determined to straighten out a paycheck that was short. She had opened the door and smiled that same shy smile as she asked him to step inside

NORTHERN LIGHTS

YOU KNOW HOW RUMOURS get started. Especially in a small town, where everyone knows who drives what chicken van with a sign on it that reads, 'Tonarosa Tubing Tours—free pick-up and delivery.' Just because folks happen to see it go past a few times with a strange woman in the passenger seat, they jump to conclusions.

Then your husband starts working later than usual after summer school's over. One of your best friends keeps 'needing his help' to fix something, or get willow for basket making. (And this is a girl who does her own carpentry). The very next day, the neighbor across the lake calls to say she just saw your husband and your friend in the bush (cutting willow). They come home with a trailer full of it, and you wonder if your friend is going into the basket industry.

Then you come home from a long day in town at meetings and shopping. You pull up to your house just as an egg customer comes out with a curious look on his face. And when you walk in the door, there's your friend at your kitchen sink helping your husband get your supper, and her hair is wet. So you end up washing her bath towel. What are friends for? So what if someone says, "Don't you ever get nervous about the time they spend together?"

And, of course, there's the contingent which doesn't believe that a man and a woman can 'be friends.'

All in all, it's a good thing my philosophy on marriage is that you either trust your mate or you don't have a marriage. Especially when I finally found out what they were really doing with all that willow. Because, if I had had a suspicious mind, I might have come to some interesting conclusions, and screwed myself out of a hand-made cedar and willow porch swing.

See, Sunday was my birthday. And Ed, being the show-off that he is, just couldn't wait 'til after the Guild Fashion Show to let me in on the big secret. So he and Judy, and I took the van on over to the Robinson Road building so they could perform an unveiling. (Or what-ever you'd call a raising of the garage door). And there it was. A gorgeous tribute to their combined talents, and my trust.

So, I'm not so dumb after all. In fact, I'm smarter than you think. Because Ed's birthday rolls around a couple of weeks before mine. And lately, since he's gotten into all this arty creativity, I've been buying him a lot of tools. After all, if he's going to make me a proper present, he's got to have the proper tools.

Running for Terry: Participants in the Terry Fox Run took off in an unexpected direction last Sunday but when they all arrived back at the municipal dock on Head

Lake, they had raised more than $2,000 for cancer research. The route was nine kilometres long, with 42 people taking part.

Redmen smash Bancroft with a 21 to 13 opener

Haliburton high school's senior Redmen football team rolled to a 21-13 victory over Bancroft in a pre season exhibition game last Thursday.

Scoring touchdowns for HHSS were Darren Danylyshen, Sean Perrin and Ryan Timbers. Craig Bain caught a two point conversion pass and Brent Flood booted a single point conversion to cap the HHSS attack.

The Redmen led by two touchdowns at the half. Bancroft closed the gap to a single TD, but the Redmen added another to stay comfortably ahead of their North Hastings rivals.

While the offense proved its ability to put together scoring drives, the defensive squad also put in a strong performance, led by Kyle Hewitt, Mark Robinson and Randy Bull.

Head coach Gary Brohman said last Thursday's exhibition match was "a hard fought contest", made more challenging by the fact that the Bancroft club was "a much bigger team than us."

Both Redmen teams will open their season at home on Friday against LCVI, who are traditionally strong contenders in the Kawartha West league. The senior game will get underway at 1:30 p.m., with the junior game to follow.

HHSS starts to sparkle with sports season now underway

The fall sports season is well underway at HHSS, with teams competing in soccer, football and field hockey.

Junior and senior soccer and football teams already have seen action, the senior soccer team winning a 4-2 decision over Fenelon Falls last Wednesday, while the Juniors lost 2-1 in the opening games of league play. On the football front, the juniors are gearing up for their season opener this Friday against LCVI at home, while the seniors will go into their season opening game fresh from a 21-13 exhibition game victory over North Hastings in Bancroft last Thursday.

This Wednesday, both soccer teams will see action against I.E. Weldon in Lindsay. On Thursday, members of the girls field hockey teams will travel to a clinic in Bancroft, and on Saturday, they'll participate in a tournament in Scarborough. They'll open their season at home next Tuesday.

Other games slated for next week will see both soccer teams at home against LCVI on Wednesday, and the football teams travelling to Fenelon Falls on Friday, September 29.

Terry Fox runners raise $2,651 for cancer study

The ninth annual Terry Fox run in Haliburton on Sunday raised a total of $2,651 in cash and pledges for cancer research.

Some 42 runners, walkers and cyclists turned out for the run under weather conditions that were close to ideal, with bright sunshine and comfortable temperatures.

Runners and walkers covered a nine kilometre route in the Haliburton village area, while cyclists travelled a full 10 kilometres.

Although the run is not a race, timing was available for those hoping to better their performance from previous years. First runner to finish was Marcel Crete in 35:56, followed by Paul Debiasi in 37:37, and Tim Davies, with a time of 40:01.

The top female finisher this year was Eva Griffith in a time of 43:40.

Diane Morgan-Eppel of Port Perry was the top fund raiser, brining in a total of $660 for her efforts on Sunday.

The run was organized by Mike Irwin with the help of a number of local high school students.

Soccer kicked off at high school

Soccer season is underway at Haliburton high school, and if the quality of play in the season-opening games last Wednesday in Fenelon Falls is any indication, the local Redmen should be strong contenders.

Paced by Jan Haedicke's three goal performance, the senior Redmen finessed their way to a 4-2 victory. Cecil Smith scored Haliburton's other goal, while the team also got particularly strong performances from David Kinsella, Darryl Winder and Roland Greber.

The junior Redmen didn't fare quite as well, losing a close 2-1 decision to their Fenelon Falls counterparts.

David Carr scored Haliburton's only goal, and had a chance to tie it up late in the game with a penalty kick, but his shot hit the crossbar and stayed out.

The Redmen will be back in action again this Wednesday, facing I.E. Weldon in Lindsay.

They'll play their first game before a home town crowd next Wednesday, September 27, beginning at 2 p.m.

Area water levels now down to 48 per cent

The stored water continued its end-of-season decline in the Haliburton area lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway. The six days to September 11 saw a drop of only 2 per cent to 48.2 per cent. This was a slow-down typical of the time of year. Near minimum flows are being maintained from these lakes since evaporation losses on the Kawarthas are nearly being equalled by the rains in recent weeks.

The Kawarthas have generally stayed a few centimetres above their late summer levels due to cooler, wetter conditions. Otonabee River flows are still near summer minimum because a wetter-than-normal trend is not really established. September flows in the river generally average 40 m³/s compared to recent 1989 values of about 18 m³/s.

How to live longer and feel better

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

WITH IMPROVED MEDICAL CARE, people are living longer and the population is growing older. But with a quantity of years being added onto most lives, quality of life becomes more important.

That was the message at a Haliburton County Home Support Services meeting at the PineStone Inn on Friday when Dr. Bob Heyes spoke to seniors on Preventative Medicine. Dr. Heyes suggests a routine of diet, exercise, regular checkups, and drug therapy for those who want to prevent medical problems in their senior years.

"It's important to add, not just years to your life, but life to your years," says Dr. Heyes. "Everyone's motto should be live long and die young."

Doctors are seeing more and more people who request cosmetic or corrective surgery, such as liposuction and hair transplants, says Dr. Heyes. "They're living longer and feeling better, so they want to look better too."

In 1989, 11 per cent of the population is over 65 years old. By the year 2031, if the birth rate remains stable, that number will increase to about 26.6 per cent of the population.

Perspective on old age has also been changing, says Dr. Heyes. From 65-74 years is considered young-old; 75-84 is middle-old; 85-89 is old-old; and 90-up is frail-old.

"In the 1950s, a ripe old age was between 50 and 55. Modern medicine is responsible for people living longer. But preventative medicine will pay off as the population grows older."

Preventing cancer

There are two types of preventative strategies geared toward the prevention of cancer, says Dr. Heyes. The primary strategies are as follows:

1) Stop tobacco use—"Since the anti-smoking campaign, more people are chewing or sniffing tobacco, but these can cause cancer of the tongue and nose," Dr. Heyes warns. Also, men are smoking less, but the number of women smokers has increased. About 35 out of 100 teenage girls are smokers. "Perhaps one of our duties as parents and grandparents is to let these kids know smoking is unhealthy and unattractive."

2) Remove pre-cancerous moles, polyps—Removal of moles is simple preventative surgery. And polyps

'A good project would be to pave an area around Head Lake because walking is one of the best exercises available': Doctor are present in all cases of colon cancer, which is the second-most common type of cancer.

3) Protection for skin from ultra-violet rays—A lotion with an SPF of no less than 15 is needed to protect against harmful rays of the sun, particularly for those who are fair-skinned or red-headed. Other people at risk are those who move from low-intensity to high-intensity sunlight areas, such as from Haliburton County in the summer to Florida in the winter.

A secondary strategy for cancer prevention is regular screening tests. Before such a test can be funded, it must meet the following criteria:

- conditions must be COMMON;
- there must be a TREATMENT;
- it must be INEXPENSIVE;
- testing methods must be ACCEPTABLE to the patient;
- the test must be SENSITIVE, with reasonably specific results.

Tests which are generally considered to be acceptable are PAP tests, mammograms, blood pressure checks, cholesterol checks and tests on stool for occult blood. Along with the PAP tests, annual mammograms are particularly important for women aged 50 to 69, whose chances of breast cancer (the most common in this group) are reduced by 40 per cent if tested regularly. Men should have regular ultrasound tests on their prostate, adds Dr. Heyes.

Another method of preventative medicine comes with a regulation of one's everyday diet. Although doctors once thought things such as coffee and hard water were causes of heart disease, Dr. Heyes says these worries have since been dismissed.

The secret to good eating is found in the four food groups: fruits and vegetables; breads and cereals; dairy products; meat and alternatives. Vitamins from fresh foods are much more beneficial than those from a pill, Dr. Heyes advises, while also asking patients to cut down salt, sugar, and saturated fats (found in meats and dairy products).

In more recent years, people have been trying to increase their fibre intake to improve the digestive system and prevent colon cancer. Especially good sources of fibre are unpeeled apples, cabbage, cauliflower, brussel sprouts and broccoli. A mixture of wheat bran and oat bran provides added fibre as well as a way to reduce cholesterol.

Since many winter fruits and vegetables are coated with wax and sprayed with fungicide, it is often suggested that they be peeled before eating. Since this takes away a lot of the fibre, and is not always possible—"Can you imagine peeling a green pepper?"—Dr. Heyes suggests frozen fruits and vegetables as an alternative. "Nutritionally, they're just as good as the day they're picked."

As for cutting out fats, Dr. Heyes advises that, although fish oils are beneficial, fats from beef and dairy products are highly saturated and should be limited. "Gone are the days when you get a one and a half inch steak," he says, recommending that three ounces of meat each day is enough. "That's a piece of meat the size of a deck of cards—just fill the rest of your plate with broccoli." Also, fats must be drained while cooking, with no heavy gravies or sauces used.

Milk should be skimmed, or at least 2 per cent, and cheeses should be of the lowest butterfat content. "Always read your labels," he says. While cheddar is extremely high in fat content, there are many skim milk cheeses, such as mozzarella, now available. Another product recently introduced from Europe is quark, which is similar to cottage cheese and can be used as a substitute for cream cheese or sour cream.

The benefits of exercise

Exercise is another integral factor in feeling young and staying healthy, and Dr. Heyes says one's fitness level can actually be improved with regular, moderate workouts.

One year into a test of 220 recently retired men (with an average age of 63), it was found that those who exercised had a 12 per cent increase in their maximum oxygen consumption (measured by a treadmill test), while the level in those who remained inactive decreased. Five years later, with continuing, unsupervised exercise, the former group had an average 9 per cent drop each decade while the level of the latter group dropped 20 per cent.

The type of exercise practised is important, says Dr. Heyes, stressing the merits of an aerobic workout. Thirty to 40 minutes of continuous, moderate exercise such as jogging, swimming or gardening is much more beneficial than short bursts of strenuous movement, such as weight-lifting. And a growing number of those in Haliburton County are taking a hint from the Europeans by doing their favourite exercise...walking. "A good project would

Silversmith elevates function to art

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

THE TWO WOMEN were leaving the Rails' End Gallery when one asked the other what she thought of the show.

"Oh, it's all modern."

"Don't you like modern?"

"Can't bear it!"

Overhearing this conversation was the thoroughly-modern traditionalist who created the show. And what she heard convinced Lois Etherington Betteridge that some explanations were in order that night when her show had its opening reception.

Modern brides don't usually ask for a tea set any more, but they may be tempted by Etherington Betteridge's sterling silver honey pot, or Tot Cup for Insomniacs. Modern? Maybe. Creative, elegant, whimsical, and innovative? Definitely.

"Some of my pieces come about because of an idea; others because I'm responding to a certain situation," Etherington Betteridge said to the 30 or so people gathered at the gallery on Saturday night. From the inspiration of Faberge's eggs (gifts to the Russian czars) she modelled her taste-tempting ice cream cone, "a universal symbol." Inlaid in the cone are pictures of her children with just as much ice cream on their face as in their bellies.

Showing slides of her work, taken by her husband Keith Betteridge, who was also at the show along with son Eric and his friend Bickie, Etherington Betteridge displayed the sense of humour which is also present in her works.

If she seems to put some of her work on a pedestal, it's not out of any undue appreciation of their merits. The bottom of her bonbon dish is just as worthy of attention as its bowl's graceful curves. And being the artist that she is, Etherington Betteridge simply couldn't display her works on any old stands—they too became a part of the art. Lines soar heavenward, taking the spirit with them.

"If you elevate things, it becomes a whole ceremony—a visual and artistic experience," she said. The hostess who offers truffles from the bonbon dish is not simply being polite; she's sharing an awareness of beauty, offering not just the truffles as a gift. It's part of "recognizing ordinary things as being spectacular parts of our lives."

Isn't that too fragile for using every day, someone once asked her. "An object of this type is not something you're apt to be dropping around." Likewise, she's not apt to have made it with bold strikes of a blacksmith's hammer. "I'm making something that's beautiful so I can't use big, ugly tools."

Shaped by hand

For the uninitiated, silversmithing is an immensely repetitive task. Imagine a piece of paper in your hand, and pretend it's a sheet of silver. Now try bending it into the shape of a bowl. You can't. What the silversmith (or tinsmith, or goldsmith, or coppersmith) does is hammer the metal's molecules away from the centre. "It isn't all romance," Etherington Betteridge once told her apprentice.

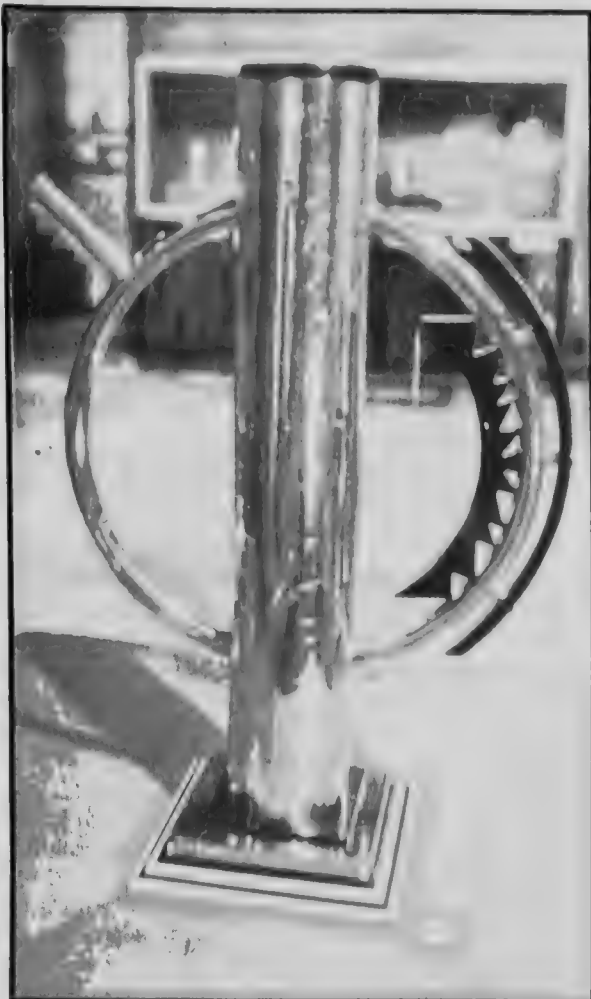

When she started, Etherington Betteridge concentrated on jewellery, but as her skills grew, so too did her desire to create something that was as pleasing to the touch as it was to the eye. (Nursing the tot cup will make you feel better than its contents.)

"I know what I see in that," she says, pointing to the slide of a bowl which seems to want to lift off the screen and fly among the display cases. "But I know others would see other things."

Etherington Betteridge's work has been widely recognized in North America, and has earned her the honour of being elected as a Distinguished Member of North American Goldsmiths. She has also won the Saidye Bronfman Award. In Haliburton County, she has become a popular teacher at the School of fine arts.

Lois Etherington Betteridge, Silversmith: Recent Work is on display at the gallery, courtesy of the Hamilton Art Gallery, which organized the national show. It runs until October 14. In the Waiting Room is a display of the works by artisans on the Studio Tour.

By making a coffee 'pot' into a work of art, we 'recognize ordinary things as being spectacular parts of our lives'.

Group supports physically challenged

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Personal initiative may have been the driving force behind the Haliburton County Support Group for the Physically Challenged, but it hopes to become a group effort of caring, sharing and practical advice.

The group was the dream of Phyllis Sisson, who is a member of a similar group in Barrie. There she had had the benefit of being with other people who had post polio. Not only did they provide her with moral strength, but they also told her about such things as which restaurant chains are wheelchair accessible, and which airlines make special concessions for the physically challenged.

But she wanted a group closer to home. She spends a lot of time at her home near the White Water Reserve but she knew there must be other people in the county who were also facing the challenges of being physically disabled. (She's lost most of her muscle strength and while her motorized wheelchair offers her freedom of movement, there are sometimes few places she can move to.)

So she started phoning around and this spring, she and three other physically challenged people met to discuss organizing the support group. The Haliburton County Advocacy Resources Group offered to help, and it is now sponsoring the support group's first public meeting on September 28.

"It's not that other people can't understand what you're going through, but if you've been there yourself, there's more of a sense of encouragement," Sisson says of why the group is so important. "You don't even have to really express what you're going through."

And that also means the husband who's had to cope with his wife's health problems. "My husband could converse with another woman's husband about how he has coped. Or it could benefit the neighbour who wants to help out but doesn't know how."

When dealing with physical challenges and the frustrations which can occur, Sisson says the important thing is "just to keep plugging away." Some people say they don't want to join because they are coping quite well on their own, but "I like to turn that around and say 'Since you have persevered for years, maybe you have something to contribute to help others.' Sometimes it's just a simple thing."

The guest speaker at the September 28 meeting is Mrs. Lois Harte-Maxwell, a Peterborough city councillor and "long term participant, supporter and initiator of support groups for individuals who are physically challenged."

Dave Woodall, a member of the advocacy group, says Mrs. Harte-Maxwell "promises to be an exciting speaker who has a lot of experience in this area. We are fortunate to have her come to Haliburton County."

The meeting will be held at the Haliburton Legion at 1:30. For more information, please call 457-4548 and leave a message, or contact Woodall at 1-328-1055.

Cardiff committees work for the people

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

WHEN A RURAL SOUNDING was conducted in Cardiff township last October 1, council had the opportunity to find out what the people really want.

Suggested by Reeve Maurice Bradley, who was deputy reeve at the time, the Sounding is based on a sociological assessment normally done for private organizations and associations. The Sounding "gives an opportunity for self-evaluation, to look at and set objectives that result from that evaluation," says Deputy Reeve Keith Murphy. "Council thought it would be interesting to try it in a municipal setting, so taxpayers could participate and have a voice in the community. One of the best things we ever thought of doing was having the Rural Sounding—it brought home what people's concerns were in the township. That's what council needs for direction."

Now, almost a year later, it's interesting to see how much has been achieved. One of the main concerns of citizens was that council start up committees to look at roads, economics and the environment. These committees were set up and have been active for several months now, with council members working together with people from the community.

The environment committee, chaired by Murphy, has been meeting since February and looks at issues such as lake water quality, the effectiveness of area septic systems, and protection of wetlands.

Last year a Peterborough consulting firm was hired to do an in-depth water quality study, using a Dylan model based on phosphorus loading in the lakes. Results from the study will be included in Cardiff's official plan.

"Now we have certain standards limiting new development," says Murphy. Cardiff has a 100-foot setback restriction for septic systems, although the Ministry of Environment only requires a 50-foot setback from water bodies. "As long as our criteria is at least as strict as the MOE, then we should be doing the right thing. But we still have problems with existing septic systems." The committee is working toward having systems in the township assessed.

The importance of wetlands

Wetlands are another priority. "Our official plan recognizes certain wetlands which are under Environmental Protection zoning," says Murphy, adding the township has hired an Environmental Youth Core through the MOE to do a complete study of all the area's wetlands.

Murphy says all information gathered through the environmental committee would be computerized so

it's accessible to bylaw enforcement officer Dennis Waymouth (who also sits on the committee). "He would just refer to the data base if someone applies for a building permit, and information on any wetlands on the property would show up."

The committee's job is also to recommend to council "various types of bylaws which are the essence in protecting environment concerns...we work on specific bylaws which help maintain septic systems and protect the wetlands but, in keeping with a growing area, allow appropriate development."

Cardiff is certainly pushing ahead as a municipality on the forefront of action and concern. Previously, only upper-tier government ministries have been involved in wetlands studies. "Having a municipal government do a wetlands study is unique," says Murphy. "It should be interesting to see how we're perceived by the MOE and the MNR (Ministry of Natural Resource) in regards to this."

The township will keep in contact with these ministries to "stay in tune with what's happening. It's getting interesting. The MOE has brought out a draft policy on wetlands, but there is no policy governing our area."

Cardiff's environment committee recently sent a letter to MOE minister Lyn McLeod regarding the Wetlands Policy Statement and Implementation Guidelines. The letter urges the ministry to take a firmer stand for wetlands protection, by using strict guidelines against development, and more adequately addressing northern wetlands. The letter also states "far too much of the responsibility for the conservation of wetlands is dumped on local governments, even though most wetlands are of provincial, national and even international significance, since they serve as breeding grounds and feeding stations for migratory species."

Taking action now

Of course, Cardiff hasn't been sitting idle, waiting for the ministry to smarten up. They've taken the people's concerns into their own hands, and say too many municipalities don't realize their potential powers.

"Environmental assessments can be called upon, but that's the responsibility of the municipality," says Murphy. "Very few have the bylaws to monitor development, but they should start working on it instead of relying on the ministries to protect them."

"Even the MNR is not responsible for wetlands unless it pertains to fisheries or wildlife habitats."

A few weeks ago a small wetlands in the township was being drained by the individual who owned the property, says Murphy. "It ended up he was letting water out of a natural breaker dam, and dropped the water levels of a small lake by eight or 10 inches. As far as we know, neither the MOE nor the MNR have jurisdiction over this."

"It's our responsibility to respond to things like this and have the bylaws in place."

Although the environmentalist hired to do Cardiff's wetlands study won't be done until the end of next year, he has already found a new osprey nesting area the MNR didn't know about, and has come across over 32 species of birds. "It's getting quite exciting," says Murphy.

Murphy understands there is a lot of confusion with some council members who don't know what their municipality governs and what is out of its jurisdiction. "My perception of the situation is that a lot of councils don't seem to realize they do have power. It's not always an upper-tier government's responsibility to control what happens in the area."

"A lot of people think the ministries set the rules, but that's not always the case. There are flat, gray areas such as wetlands which nobody seems to think is in their jurisdiction."

Still, municipal governments do have restrictive guidelines in their decision-making process. "Municipalities don't have more freedoms. We are responsible to various acts, such as the Municipal Act, and we're restricting by how we can legally instigate decisions through bylaws."

"Upper-tier governments could take responsibility if they wanted to, but it's often more politically astute to hand down decisions to municipalities rather than try to deal with them on a provincial level."

"Local governments can go beyond the basis of legislation, within reason of course. If you start cramping the people's rights, you'll be hearing about it pretty soon."

New drugs help women going through menopause

be to pave an area around Head Lake, because walking is one of the best exercises available."

Consumption of alcohol and drugs must be moderated. But quite often drug therapy is necessary for quality of life. One "exciting breakthrough," discussed at two conferences Dr. Heyes recently attended, comes with new-found dosage levels of the hormone estrogen, often given to women going through menopause.

Previously, doctors shied away from estrogen replacement therapy because its administration increased the risk of cancer of the uterus. Now, when given correctly, "the cancer causing effect of estrogen is preventable," advises Dr. Heyes. Although a woman's menstrual cycle may return after menopause, the following are benefits of estrogen therapy:

- 1) Relieves menopause symptoms;
- 2) Preserves estrogen-dependent organs;
- 3) Prevents osteoporosis;
- 4) Reduces heart disease after menopause; and
- 5) May reduce chances of breast cancer.

Estrogen helps to preserve the female sex organs. "If you've kept up your sex life, estrogen will enhance your pleasure and well-being," says Dr. Heyes. "It's now being recommended to virtually all women for an indefinite period of time."

In upcoming years, scientists will come out with "a marvellous array of drugs" geared toward helping people live longer, more productive lives, he says. In the meantime, preventative measures should be taken to keep people "living to a ripe old age."

Hawk Lake cottagers battle levels with longer docks

Little and Big Hawk Lake cottagers are trying to solve their low lake level problems by building longer, permanent docking structures.

At last Wednesday's council meeting, there were several requests from cottagers wanting to extend their docks well past the high water mark. Some would use piles and concrete to secure the docks.

Council was concerned about safety if the docks extended so far out into the water.

Meanwhile, by-law enforcement officer Jim Moore reported that it would be very difficult to ticket boats left too long at the government dock on Little Hawk Lake.

When a used boat is sold, the new owners do not have to change the name on the original registration form. One day, when Moore used the registration numbers to try to locate an owner, he found the boat had been sold three times since the previous purchase, yet this was not recorded on any registration records.

approval said the site could operate for several more years. However, sand seams were recently discovered and the ministry said the dump must close by June, 1990.

There is a possible four-year gap between the closing of the dump and when Peterborough will have another site available. Peterborough Council received a letter from Roger Hewson, owner of Oakview Lodge, which is beside the government docks. He said boats are kept at the dock for longer than the 12-hour maximum and there are also unsightly barges.

has applied to have the Otonabee site expanded to receive waste during this gap but first it had to ensure "other alternative locations within a reasonable distance of the city cannot receive the city and township's waste."

Stanhope sent Peterborough its assurances that Peterborough garbage can stay in Peterborough County.

Monmouth Council...

Monmouth Council held its regular meeting on September 11, and discussed the following items: The following bills and accounts were paid: Road Voucher No. 8, $86,211.42; General Voucher No. 8, $79,091.30.

Council petitioned for interim payment under the Public Transportation and Highway Improvement Act on expenditures made in the year 1989.

Council advised Totten, Sims, Hubicki that a Township representative will contact their firm as inspections are required for the works garage project. Also that necessary torque testing and landscaping will be under the Township's supervision and direction.

The MTO will be contacted about the unsafe highway intersection at Hwy. 648 and Earles road.

A public meeting was held at 8:00 PM for the rezoning application of Jarcan Holdings Ltd. re Concession 10, part lot 21. No persons appeared either to support or object to the Zone Change. A letter from the Ministry of Natural Resources was recorded saying they had no objection.

By-Law 89-18 to the Comprehensive Zoning By-Law of the township, was passed.

Severance H476/89 was approved as submitted. Severances H513/89, H514/89, H515/89 were approved as submitted.

Council endorsed the request by the Lake Wilbermere Land Owners Association for a survey under the Cottage Pollution Control Program.

The Paudash Snowmobile Club was given permission to use the Township property located on the Old Hadlington Road, and the former I.B. and O. Railroad line from Highway 503 to County Road 4 and Hadley Hill. Wardens are not to enforce Club rules on Township property.

Council gave the reeve an honourarium of $1,500 for being the County Warden this year.

A ring to remember — and lose while she fetched her father.

With trembling hands Harry slipped the ring on Nellie's finger. It went on very easily and his heart sank as he realized it was too big. When he tried to say something, she pooh poohed it, stating the ring was just fine and she loved it the way it was. Holding it out at arm's length over the bridge, she admired its design while Harry basked in the joy of it all. Then she turned to take his arm, for the two of them had to go and tell her parents and as she moved her hand, a terrible thing happened.

The minute she lowered her hand, the ring slipped off and down into the water below. She could have killed herself on the spot and Harry wanted to take a gun to his own head for buying a ring so big for such a small finger. But try as they might, with the help of her cousins and Harry's co-workers, the ring disappeared into the sandy lake bottom, never to be found again.

Harry ended up going into partnership with Nellie's father and eventually taking over the business. He bought her many rings in the years that followed. They were all beautiful, far more grand than the one that was lost. But she always hoped it would somehow be found, for it told of a long dusty walk one beautiful fall day.

THIS WEEK

Outsiders also part of community

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

here, but I've never felt it. It could be I'm not sensitive about it, but I don't find any maliciousness behind the question "Are you from around here?" And if someone did hold my negative answer against me, I simply wouldn't care.

The decline of the great Haliburton empire might have something to do with the fact that at least half, if not more, of Haliburton County's population is from away (such demographics are not very important to Statistics Canada so precise figures are not known.) Secondly, with such a broader population base, if newcomers aren't whole-heartedly accepted into the community, there's not the same sense of solitude. There are other from awayers to become friends with.

You don't have to be born here to belong.

Last week, however, I found small-town snobbery was not dead. And the source, accusing me of being an outsider, was another outsider.

Ontario folklorist Pauline Greenhill has just written a book called True Poetry: Traditional and Popular Verse in Ontario. Its thesis is that the poetry published in small-town newspapers is a testimonial to the values and mores of the community it reflects. Whether it is good or bad, all poetry should be published for this very reason alone, she contends.

Now I don't want to open up a hornet's nest by discussing the Echo's thoughts on community poetry, but rather, respond to an accusation Greenhill makes about why poetry is not published in more papers.

"Editors are often outsiders who do not share local values. (Therefore), it is not surprising that the local newspaper is a difficult medium for publication. Publishers and editors see the local newspaper first as a money-making enterprise, a view reflected in its contents."

To back up this point, Greenhill uses an editor's quote which explains that the number of pages in a newspaper is determined by the amount of advertising, not the amount of news. Which is absolutely true, although we sometimes have to add two pages just to get all the news in. There were times this summer when the newspaper everyone bought for 50 cents cost us 80 cents to print. As a result, we depend on advertising revenue to pay for the bulk of our costs. Newsmakers don't pay to have their names in the paper.

I refuse to apologize for the fact a newspaper is a business. Printing bills must be paid, buildings aren't given away for free, and the staff usually likes to receive a paycheque twice a month. Greenhill, who has been supported by government grants and works at a publically-funded university, never has to see where her money comes from. It's just there. Newspapers have to work for it.

But to be accused of not understanding the community because I wasn't born here!! I have been in people's houses from Dorset to Cardiff and all points in between. I have talked to oldtimers about what it was like to grow up here, and what they think of the changes they've seen. (My story on Ed Miller, our local poet, was one of the longest I've ever written—6,000 words.) I've driven 15 kilometres through a snow storm to take pictures of Brownies who are flying up to Guides. I have talked to newcomers about what made the Highlands special enough to move here. I have written a countless number of "people profiles", as well as explored the many issues people are concerned about.

And there are still people I want to interview, and issues which I feel need discussing. The Echo sincerely tries to reflect the communities it serves, and is undergoing a concerted effort to cover events in all corners of the county. In some ways, we've perpetuated the myths about small-town life—the neighbourliness, friendliness, the quaint colloquialisms and community spirit. But we've also talked about the silence which condoned family violence; the unwillingness to accept that local children are sexually abused, that teenagers are getting involved with drugs and alcohol; that some families can disintegrate.

In the four years I've been here, I've picked up a lot of useful information which helps me put things in context. You know who's related to whom, and what might be their motivation for saying certain things. A sense of trust has also been developed, which is vital if this paper is to survive.

Yet at the same time, I realize that if I was born here, I wouldn't be less able to distance myself from the people I write about. What would I say about the local politicians if I was related to them? Do you want simply a mirror or a search light? And would I be able to see the stories, or would they just seem unimportant because I've grown up with them?

If a newspaper is to succeed in objectively reporting what is going on in its communities, it must be both part of them and separate at the same time. It's a difficult balance to maintain, but it can be done—even by outsiders.

Committees help shape the course which takes Cardiff into the future

Since Cardiff conducted the Rural Sounding last year, council has tried to keep an ear out for residents' concerns, and hopes to conduct one each year. "It has become obvious that communication is the key in order to respond to the taxpayer," says Murphy.

Economic development

As for the township's economic development committee, headed by Reeve Bradley, the group's two major thrusts are to delve into types of industrial growth to promote tourism and to look at affordable housing for everyone from single families to senior citizens. Development of the community's fire department is also under the jurisdiction of this committee.

Cardiff's roads committee, chaired by past reeve and present councillor Mac Peters, looks at "how we service and maintain the roads and improve our service delivery."

Another group which was previously in existence, but has taken on the philosophy of the others is Cardiff's recreation committee, chaired by councillor Paul Spent. "This committee is really moving—right now there's a recreational needs study being conducted," says Murphy.

All committees are locally funded, since no direct funding from outside is available. Money from some of the environmental studies is provided from the ministries, but the wetlands study has been fully paid for by council.

Murphy says there are a lot of benefits to the committee approach. "A committee can be very effective and helpful to council." He recently witnessed a long dispute handled by the roads committee within a matter of hours. "There was all sorts of gobbledygook that would have taken several council meetings to straighten out, but the committee went down to the site, listened to both sides of the story, and were very objective in their decision."

"It's so much better than having one party approach council one month, the next party the next month, and just stretching out the matter. And if you're doing that for 20 items at once it gets cumbersome."

Sometimes important items will become low-prioritized when a council is quite busy. "There is an impression there that councils don't care, when in fact they don't have the mechanisms to do all the work. That's where committees come in."

"I think we have a fairly responsive council, willing to work for the community," says Murphy. "A lot of recognition should go toward Reeve Maurice Bradley, who has started the ball rolling. If it wasn't for him, none of these initiatives would have come into fruition."

'Officer, a monkey's in my tree...'

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

WHEN THE MINDEN OPP were called into Gelert on September 6 to get a kidnapped monkey out of a tree, they probably thought someone in the neighbourhood had gone bananas.

Area resident Doris Robertson certainly couldn't believe her eyes when the monkey scampered outside the kitchen window while she was washing dishes. But it was Elizabeth Alrutz who phoned the police, not knowing what to do when the monkey climbed up her neighbour's tree.

"The police sent a paddy wagon out, but I think they were sending it for her," says the monkey's owner, Lou Weber. "What would you think if someone phoned to say there's a monkey up their tree?"

The Weber family had tried to keep quiet about George the squirrel monkey since they bought him last spring. "I didn't really want to tell the neighbours because I was sure they'd think I was off my rocker," laughs Mrs. Weber. So—when a couple of strangers took George away from his home that day, and then turned him loose in the neighbourhood—no one knew where the strange little monkey had come from.

It seems George was lured away from the barn by two strangers in a white pick-up truck with blue writing on the side. ("Monkeys are greedy—just dangle something and you can lure them away.") But when they grew tired of the creature which had first held such fascination to them, they tried to sell him to Joe Graham, a passer-by on the main street. (Imagine walking through downtown Gelert and being stopped by two characters saying, "Psst, wanna buy a monkey?")

The pair also tried to foist the monkey on Elizabeth and Henry Alrutz, who were in their backyard. When they were unsuccessful, the two men dumped George and ran for their truck. The Alrutz's dog was loose, and started to chase George. "I was so afraid for the monkey that I didn't have time to get the license plate," says Mrs. Alrutz. "But I could certainly identify those men if I saw them."

Up a tree

Following his instincts, George climbed up the nearest tree (monkeys are quite vulnerable on the ground). The monkey was retrieved with a fishing net and plopped into a freshly-washed flour sack Mrs. Robertson had planned to use for straining pickles.

George arrived at the Minden police office wrapped in the sack in the back of the paddy wagon. He was then taken to Dr. Peter Bennett's office. (It didn't take long for someone in the office to fall in love with George and want to adopt him).

Meanwhile, later that day, Lou's husband Norm was working on drywall at the home of Graham, who began to unwind the yarn of his adventure... "You'll never believe what happened to me today..."

Gelert goes bananas over stolen monkey; kidnappers high-tail it

'Psst, wanna buy a monkey?'

Needless to say, Graham was shocked to hear Weber's response: "Monkey? That's my monkey!"

Bright and early the next morning, Mrs. Weber went to Dr. Bennett's to pick up George, who was scared and disoriented following the ordeal. "He hadn't been in a cage since I got him in June," she says. "I let him out and he was frantic. He jumped from the car seat to the window, bonking his head."

"As soon as George and I got home, I let him out. He jumped around in the grass, and was a happy guy after he was finally home."

George certainly must have been relieved to be back in his barn, where he lives with Curly the ram, Velvet the horse, and several clucking chickens. Although friendly with all but the chickens ("He must look like an egg thief"), Mrs. Weber says

George sometimes seems a bit lonely.

"He's found his niche with the other animals, but sometimes I'd like to get another monkey—a female. I don't know if I'd want to start breeding them, but I do think George looks lonely."

The Webers bought George from Chris and Wolf Close at the Orono Jungle Cat World, which also has creatures such as lions, tigers, baboons and chimpanzees. Monkeys can be difficult to purchase, because they can't be brought into the country. But it seems George was a little too aggressive with the other male squirrel monkey. And, although someone from Montreal wanted to buy him, "Wolf didn't want him to go that far away," Mrs. Weber saved up to buy the three-year-old creature.

"It seemed to be the right decision, and George really loves it here." Named after Curious George by the Webers' sons, 12-year-old Max and 14-year-old Andre, it was their growing maturity that was the final push in Mrs. Weber's "need" for the monkey.

"The boys are getting very independent, and I kind of felt like I needed something to look after...something that needed me. A monkey is small enough to keep in the house, and intelligent enough to keep me company. And he gets along great with the cats," she adds with a laugh.

"As soon as I made up my mind, I had him within two months. My father couldn't believe it. He doesn't have time to adjust to my impulses."

A charming little fellow

Vivian and Blair Hanthorn may have thought their daughter was nuts, but since getting to know the monkey, Mr. Hanthorn has been George's biggest fan. He went with Mrs. Weber to pick up the monkey, "wanting to make sure I wasn't getting in over my head, which I probably was. Now my parents just think the world of him. Dad always brings treats when he comes to visit—he's really taken a liking to George."

George is interesting to watch as he roams around. Performing his fair share of acrobatics, George used to leap from a top window to a conveyer shaft high up in the barn. He's been more careful, though, since scraping his chin after a fall while hanging in the hayloft.

Monkeys certainly are agile, but they can't fly through the air with the greatest of ease, as some might believe. "He falls quite a bit," says Mrs. Weber. "If you drop him, he doesn't react like a cat and land feet first. He just hits the floor."

Wanting a monkey since childhood (when "teacup monkeys" were advertised on the back of comic books for $25), Mrs. Weber wasn't wholly positive about what to do when she finally got George.

"I was trying to tame him to go on a leash, but he didn't like that at all. He'd rather see his friends in the barn or in the greenhouse. When you have pets, you have to give them as much freedom as you can. And they'll return it with affection and loyalty."

Still, George isn't the average, run-of-the-mill pet, and Mrs. Weber has considered purchasing some clothes for him to wear. "He might need a cap and a sweater when it gets cold in the winter. We'll try to insulate the box stall in the barn, and put in a heat pump. But it still might be too cold. If he does come in the house, we'll have to get some tiny diapers. Monkey habits are pretty raw."

This winter George will probably miss the abundance of his favourite snack...flies. Although he enjoys fresh fruits, vegetables and a handful of nuts, nothing tops flies on George's list of goodies, and he'll occasionally raid a spider's web.

"A couple of times he's caught wasps instead of flies, and you've never seen a retreat so fast," says Mrs. Weber. "He'll also eat the odd worm, but he doesn't like to get his hands dirty." George also enjoys the greenhouse cucumbers, but doesn't have the strength to pick them. "He crawls down from

Minden artist weaves magic on her loom

And she'll open her doors on the Studio Tour

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

WOOL IS EVERYWHERE in Vicki Cross's house. It's tumbling out of the brightly-coloured woven basket by the piano, on the spinning wheel next to the television. There's a loom in the narrow kitchen with evidence of the green wool blanket on it and skeins of purple and magenta on the dining room table. Walking down the hall to the loom in her daughter's bedroom, you step on two woven rugs and when Mrs. Cross opens the curtains in her son's room, you're told they are hand woven as well.

"I'm very fortunate my husband is really tolerant," Mrs. Cross says, looking timidly around her house, at least one aspect of weaving seen in every corner. "There's wool all over the place and sometimes it's dangerous to open the closets."

Now if wool grew on trees, Brian Cross would be much more excited about weaving. As it is, when the Ministry of Natural Resource forester comes home for lunch, he seems to unconsciously (or perhaps this comes with practice) ignore anything that even resembles weaving—except the placemat on which his lunch is placed. The conversation turns to trees.

Once he's gone back to work, Mrs. Cross picks up the thread of description of why weaving holds such fascination for her. As she talks, she eyes the pile of wool on the table. You might just see a mound of colour, but in her mind's eye, it's a blanket, which three or four days from now will be lovingly taken off the loom in the kitchen. That is, if she can find the time before the Studio Tour arrives on her doorstep as well.

Mrs. Cross is one of the 30 artisans featured in the second annual Haliburton County Studio Tour. On September 30 and October 1, they will open their doors and studios to the hundreds of people who will travel the area's roads, looking for that special handmade item which appeals to their own sense of creativity. It's a chance to explore the Highlands when Nature is also putting on a tremendous show and last year's tour was immensely popular.

The problem Mrs. Cross is having is that she likes to give away her weaving—to children moving into apartments in the city, to relatives getting married, to visitors whose neck would get cold without a scarf. (Mrs. Cross, who doesn't want to believe summer is over, has all the windows open on a chilly fall day.)

Her children, Laura and Doug, are the main beneficiaries of Mrs. Cross's talents. Last year, when they kept bringing home their dirty laundry in garbage bags, she wove them beautiful laundry bags—blue with streaks of magenta and turquoise. "Ted Carson (at Handcraft Wools) said if Laura got tired of it as a laundry bag she could cut it and wear it as a skirt."

Colours, shapes and Tom Thompson inspire weaver

Now Doug is bothered by the sun shining through a large picture window at his apartment. His mother's solution is to weave a series of panels—at least 10 feet long and enough of them to cover an 18-foot-wide window—which will represent the sky as the sun rises and then sets.

Cold feet are Laura's problem. When Mrs. Cross was weaving the soft, cushiony rug, she decided to have a little fun. Into one corner, she wove in some fluffy fleece and working her way up the rug, she added a little brown and black to form a sheep's face. (Because she couldn't see the entire face at one time, she was afraid it would end up looking like a cow.) It was here way to pay homage to the sheep, without whose wool, she wouldn't have anything else to spend her money on.

And knowing how students rarely have much money, Mrs. Cross is letting them brown bag with style. She's woven brown lunch bags which no one would dare crumple up and throw in the garbage along with their apple cores.

Laura has influenced her mother's weaving in another way as well. Before, Mrs. Cross stuck to earth-tone colours, but Laura's favourite colour is purple. Now the browns have been over-run with the heart-warming shades of lilac, violet, pink, magenta. "When I have her in mind, I get these colours."

In a way, it was her children who got her interested in weaving. Born in Yugoslavia she moved here in 1962. By the end of the sixties she was a mother of children who were constantly growing out of the clothes she made for them. Then Doug was asked to bring a blanket to kindergarten. Mrs. Cross didn't want him to have any old blanket so she sewed one with a lion on it and stuffed the head to act as a pillow.

However, it wasn't until the family vacationed in the East Coast that she really became aware of weaving. "We stumbled onto one of those arts and crafts fairs and I saw these beautiful blankets. A lady had her loom set up and I thought maybe that's something I could do. But it was beyond my comprehension at the time (how you worked with all the threads.)"

Back home, she signed up in a Sir Sandford Fleming College weaving course taught by Judy Chapman (who's also on the tour.) In later years she'd also study weaving with Ankaret Dean, and then basket weaving with this "fun" teacher because she needed someplace to put all her wool. "From then on I've been taking courses and getting deeper and deeper into it. You can create something that's very useful but you can use your own colour and design."

"Sometimes I wonder what my neighbours think of me—you never know what will be hanging from my clothesline."

Weaving's main components are the warp and the weft. The warp is the stands of material—wool, cotton, linen—which are threaded through the "eyes" of the loom. You can change the colours while you're setting up the loom, but once on, they stay that way.

The loom's purpose is to separate those threads. On a basic pattern, the loom will lift up every second thread. The weaver then runs the "weft" through these threads. The weft is threads of any colour, which can be interchanged at any time to give you different patterns. The weaver bangs the weft against the forming cloth and then using the hands, or foot peddles, the weaver makes the loom separate the alternate threads and repeats the process.

On the wall in the Cross's dining room hangs a linen transparency of a white pine being blown by a northern wind. There are 480 fine threads in the warp, all of which had to be gingerly threaded through the loom to avoid tangling. As she worked the weft in and out, Mrs. Cross followed her personally-designed pattern tell her when to weave in the thicker strands of linen which would form the shape of the tree.

The wool blanket she just took off the loom had a warp of 714 strands. It took her a day to dye the wool, another to prepare the warp, a day to set up the loom, three full days of weaving and she has yet to spend the day washing and brushing it. At $300, it will be a bargain.

"Setting up the loom is probably the most painful, especially on your back, and it's monotonous."

Mrs. Cross admits. "Someone will speak to me and I'll say 'Four?'"

Deciding what to make is also time consuming. "When you're weaving, a little colour pattern will catch your eye and you think that would look good as something else. Sometimes I just look around at all the yarns I have around the house and think 'What can I make.'"

"Once a year I go to the National Gallery in Ottawa to absorb the art. I usually end up sitting in front of Tom Thompson's Northern River." Thompson's influence can be seen in her work. Last year, a woman on the tour looked at Mrs. Cross's white pine transparency and thought it was taken from a Tom Thompson painting. "I said no, it's actually me, but I was influenced by his shapes. Driving north, we would see this pine tree growing out of a rock and wonder how it survived and has the energy to grow."

It's difficult for Mrs. Cross to put a price on her pieces. There's the cost of the wool, but how do you measure the value of a person's creativity?

"I think people like to get something that's done by a person they know and it's probably something they won't see in a store. When I give a gift, I like them to know there's a little part of me in it. Several people on the last Studio Tour said they had something of mine and it was really nice to get that feedback."

"Sometimes I'm really proud of what I weave and I like to get a little recognition or appreciation of the work I put in."

And people don't have to handle her pieces with kid gloves (although you still can't try to clean wool with bleach). "Every piece I sell I put through a test so if it's going to shrink, it will shrink here. I try to do all the things that possible could go wrong. Everything should keep its shape and colour."

Last year, Mrs. Cross thought only a handful of people would drop by her Minden home on the Studio Tour. She was shocked when the people didn't stop coming, welcoming 300 people. This year, she's not sure what to expect, and is shocked that the summer has flown by so quickly. There were so many things she planned to put on the loom, so many wools which she wants to take on new shapes, and when will she get time to clean up the house, with its balls of wool all over the place?

Monkey now the neighbourhood sweetheart

vine to vine and eats whatever's fresh that day."

A curious George

Corn is another favourite.

One thing Mrs. Weber has noticed about George is that his presence is definitely a conversation-starter. This summer she had a yard sale and put out a cot filled with trail mix to get him to come out in the open. "A lot of people just couldn't believe their eyes when they saw this little monkey," she says. "I love seeing different people's reactions. Their eyes just light up."

Still, most of the neighbours didn't know about George. And, although some might think it strange to be secretive about a pet, even more find it strange that anyone would have a monkey in the first place. "When you get a pet like that you realize they're kind of maligned," says Mrs. Weber. "But George is different. He's clean and quite responsible. He's greedy, but we all have our downfalls. He's just a lively little guy."

And what do the neighbours think? "Everybody loves him. Doris just thinks he's a sweetheart. And I'm thankful to everyone who helped out when George went missing—that's good neighbours."

As for the monkey-nappers, Mrs. Weber thinks they probably have their regrets. "They must be sorry for what they did. Maybe they saw him from the road and lured him over to where they could grab him. It's not everyday you see a monkey, you know."

And if the monkey thieves don't feel bad about the incident, Mrs. Weber adds with a smile: "I hope they got bitten."

Still happy (and married) after all these years...

On their 65th anniversary, the Dovells have good advice to give

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

IT WAS A BRIGHT, sunny Wednesday afternoon when Vivian and Thomas Dovell decided to drop in at the United Church rectory in Fenelon Falls to get married.

Sixty-five years later, friends and relatives from all over Ontario gathered at the Glamorgan Community Centre to help the Dovells celebrate the anniversary of this union.

"You learn to live when you've been married 65 years," says Mrs. Dovell, who gives her secret to a long, happy marriage: "We both like the same things. You have to have the same interests, or it won't work."

Vivian Maxwell was brought up on a farm in Irondale, but it was as a Gooderham "town girl" (born in 1908) that she met the "farm boy" (born in 1900) who would become her future husband.

"We just dropped by the rectory and got married," says Mr. Dovell. "We didn't want to wait." The newlyweds went to the Lindsay Central Exhibition during their honeymoon, and have gone each year since.

Originally from Saskatchewan (then known as the North West Territories), Mr. Dovell brought his new wife to a farm and the couple raised beef and milk cows from 1929 to 1945.

After retiring from the farm, the couple moved to a house right in downtown Gooderham.

Mr. Dovell began working construction and for the Ministry of Natural Resources at a reforestation project, and eventually assisted Mrs. Dovell with her job at the post office from 1960 to 1973.

The couple has one son, Dale, who was joined by wife Sandra and their two daughters at the anniversary celebration. And Mrs. Dovell's sister-in-law, Mary Maxwell, travelled all the way from Marmora, Ont. Approximately 50 other people, including family and Gooderham neighbours, also joined in the celebrations—they probably wanted to take notes on a happy marriage.

Vivian and Thomas Dovell celebrate their 65 years together

Local poems in book

Two local poets have had their works published in a newly-released book.

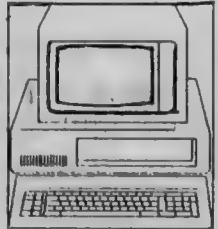

True Poetry: Traditional and Popular Verse in Ontario by Pauline Greenhill explores the poetry published in small-town newspapers.

Elsie Moore's poem, Haliburton, opens the book and there are several references to the poems of Edward Miller of Haliburton. Ms. Greenhill, who has a Phd in cultural studies, interviews Mr. Miller.

The book is published by McGill-Queen's University Press.

Norland church women's dinner at end of the month

COBOCONK NEWS

by Sheila Lake

Mrs. Marion Weaver, Mr. Ingram Wessell, Mr. Wayne Downes and Rose Rocchio and George Shepherd, have all been in hospital recently. Some have been back in a second time, after a short stay at home. To you folk who have been ill, we trust you are soon fully recovered and feeling well again.

Our former neighbour, Sandford Richman, died at Orillia a week ago, and we send sincere sympathy to his daughter, Wilamene Fell, of Hawkestone, and her daughters and their families. Sandy had been in Bestview Rest Home, very crippled up with arthritis. He was 92 or 93 years old, very alert, but unable to move about very much. His wife, Fanny, passed away a couple of years ago.

Many will remember the little lady who used to live with Jack and Myrtle Tooze. So many times you'd see her, hurrying down from their home on Albert St. then later, from their Grandy Road residence. Her name was Vi Bodkin, and for the last few years, she has been in a Bobcaygeon nursing home. Vi died a short while ago, about 90 years of age, with no immediate family.

Mrs. Laura Archer of Lindsay, spent a couple of days with Ross and Myrtle Faulkner, last week.

The Norland United Church Women are having a roast beef dinner on September 30 with two sittings at 4:30 PM and 6 PM. Adult tickets are $10, children under 12, $5; and preschoolers free. Phone 454-3771 or 454-8381 if you want more information.

Ladies interested in fitness classes, register at the Coboconk Community Hall on Sept. 11 for a series of classes lasting eight weeks. The instructor is Bev and she's there to help her students.

Have you ever had the window of your car just up and explode? That's what happened to Flo Alton's car last Saturday morning as she was about to leave for Lindsay. There was a very loud noise as the glass shattered.

Joyce Day has not been well and her many friends wish her improved health. Also, Russell Hale of Norland has not been well.

The family and friends of Ray Robertson visited him at Victoria Manor on Thursday Sept. 7 to wish him a happy 84th birthday.

I was surprised to see, Murray Barron, from Virginia at my door on Tuesday. He was in the area with his Rawleigh products and called to see an old friend, Walter Curl.

Walter and Charlotte Truax of Trenton Michigan, are visiting the Everet Camerons.

Winners in the Coboconk Seniors Card games on Tuesday Sept. 5 were as follows: Euchre — Lena Jones, Thelma Watson, Mary Button, Flo Nykyforiak, Elva Hannivan, Adrian Lee, Den Reesor, Frieda Boyce, Peter Nykyforiak. Bridge: Phyl Pearce, Myra Dyon, Nada Potts and Joe Clark. Winners in the Coboconk Seniors card games on Sept. 12 were: Euchre: Mildred Faulkner, Dorothy Brown, Norma Herbert, Leona Fountain, Ivy Boyce, Hilda Chynoweth, Gloria Cousins, Doug Taylor, Tom Bowins, Doug Taylor, Ken Reesor. Bridge: Helen Gillies, Arlene Woods, Jack Sim and Colin Anderson.

The New Horizons and Seniors held their quilt draw on Sept. 12 and the winner was Lyn Allan of Cameron. Second prize of a $50 food voucher was won by L. Freamo of Manitack, Ont. and the third prize of Wintario tickets was won by Hilda Chynoweth of Norland.

The Lions Club held its last bingo of the season on Sept. 6 and the $300 jackpot was won by Gladys Finn of Kirkfield. The Lions appreciate the good support of their bingo fans and they should be back for another busy summer next year.

Bill and Karen Hirstwood, Matthew and his sister Rachel of Sutton Bob Hill of Newmarket and friend Claire Stewart of Toronto; Peter strong and friend, Barbara, Marsh of Udon, Clint and Heather Hirstwood, Chris and Megan of Coboconk and neighbours Doug and Janet Hirstwood and bays were all visitors of Mrs. Carolyn Strong on Buller Road last weekend.

Bob Cruickshanks of Toronto spent last weekend with his mother, Flo Alton. Ken and Agnes McKinnon of Log Chateau Trailer Park, near Burnt River, were also recent visitors of Flo Alton.

Did you know there is a clinic for testing of those with hearing problems?

Phone the local Medical Centre at 454-3375 for dates when you can have your hearing tested.

Lyness and Ruth Spry, Frank, Mary and Tanya Spry and Judy Sobko and girls, recently enjoyed a two-week holiday to our Eastern provinces. Bill and Gayla Davey also had a "down east" holiday in August. Nora Toole has been visiting relatives in New Brunswick and other eastern areas.

The A.L.M.F. ladies group of Faith Tabernacle met at the home of the pastor, Dave and Laurie Campbell, on Monday Sept. 11 for their regular monthly meeting. The President, Eleanor Crane, presided over the meeting, which opened with singing of several choruses, "Make Me More Like Thee", "Seek Ye First", "Spring Up Oh Well", "Setting All The Captives Free" and "Hallelujah, Hallelujah" with Faye Orr on guitar. Eleanor opened the business with prayer, followed by other ladies, each remembering the Bruce Salmom family in the far north. Devotions was taken by Faye Orr who spoke on Cultivating, comparing the way a gardener prepares the soil to cultivate the spiritual life. Eleanor thanked Faye and making crafts was discussed for the winter months. Bonnie Quinn read Minutes of last meeting. Everyone's to bring something to next meeting to make up a parcel for Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Salmon and family. Jessie Cameron will take devotions for next month. Laurie Campbell served a delicious lunch of fruit bread, cheese, tea and coffee. Eleanor thanked Laurie for her hospitality.

My mother, Annie Marles, and I enjoyed a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Louie Marles and family in Peterborough, last week.

The Norland and area Seniors card games on Thurs. Sept. 14 were well attended and had the following winners: Euchre— Lloyd Brown, Thelma Adams, Inga Wassell, Gene Crisp, John Button, Ralph Purvis, John Button. Bridge: Lily Smith, Ralph Brown.

Lucky draw winners were Bert and Thelma Adams, Annie Watson, Dorothy Brown, Ruth Brown and Leona fountain.

The Norland Seniors begin their bowling on Wed. Sept. 20, so anyone interested is more than welcome to join for fun.

The local police have been really busy rounding up drug users and drug peddlers. I'm sure many parents are happy to see these people caught because drugs can destroy so many of fine young people.

Congratulations to the newest member of the local Lions Club, Norma Downes, who is now officially a "Lion". No doubt, she has always worked behind the scene, helping her husband, who is President of the club. After all, I'm sure you've seen the Lions wives helping out at Carnivals, bingo's, etc., who why not become a member yourself?

Have you seen the 11 1/2 foot sun flower on Albert Street, just two doors past the public school? I hope some little wild canary's find the beautiful seeds for a snack. They are fascinating to watch!

Carmen and Eva Pearce celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last Sat. Sept. 9 with a lot of visitors dropping by with best wishes, and a dance in the evening. Good luck and best wished for many more years of happiness!!

Also, Jim and Jean Hannivan have reached the quarter-century mark of married life. May you reach the big "50" together!

The home of Rod and Catherine Harrison at Norland was a very busy place last Sat. Sept. 9, when their future daughter-in-law, Louise St. Peters, was honored at a bridal shower. She will wed their son, John, later this fall.

Charlie Cameron hosted a birthday party for Millie McCaw recently and had a host of visitors.

"Cruddy" and Faye Butler of Peterborough, were weekend visitors of Betty Moore.

Foot clinic is changed

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

Please note that the date and place of the October Foot Clinic has been changed. Instead of Wednesday, October 18, the clinic will be held on Tuesday, October 10. It will be held at the Dorset Public School with appointments at time given.

Birthday wished are extended to Ann MacDonald of Huntsville on September 1 and to Helen Sutton, of Kawagama Lake, on the 19.

Wednesday, Sept. 13, is opening day for the Dorset Senior Club Fall season and there is to be a potluck supper at 6 PM. This will be followed by a business meeting and social evening. This is the time you pay your dues for the year, $3 for a year per person. Potluck suppers are always fun and good turnout is expected.

If I could only print things like were found in the old Dorset Drain Pipe, a scandal sheet that was the product of the wit and imagination of one Irishman, named Fitzgerald, who operated the Dorset Hotel many years ago. It was full of suggestive witticisms, with the letters of names transposed, which really didn't disguise them. Some of the items printed were really off colour and today would be fodder for lawsuits, but in the early days they were just amusing tid-bits for the local gentry to snicker about, providing some amusement in a time when entertainment was home made. Today, some of the things printed in the Drain Pipe as more or less scandalous, wouldn't cause even a lifted eyebrow. Ho-Hum.

Irene and Jack Clayton are away on a motor trip to Newfoundland and other points in the eastern provinces. We wish them a safe journey on their much deserved holiday.

How do you measure...

- Leadership? □ Excellence? □ Courage?
- Dedication? □ Initiative? □ Selflessness?

Outstanding contributions to the quality of life in our communities are being made everyday by young citizens. Do you know someone between the ages of 6 and 18 who has demonstrated selfless service, overcome a physical or psychological limitation, performed an act of heroism, shown initiative, or simply a dedication to the well-being of those around them? Someone who has more than "measured up" in their commitment to others?

You can help Canadian Airlines International and the Ontario Community Newspapers Association honour that special someone by nominating them for an Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Award. Every nominee receives a certificate and up to 12 individuals and one group will be the recipients of a plaque presented by the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, $200.00 and a family portrait with the Lieutenant Governor. Mother says you must nip lice in the nit

Editor's note: The following article is written by a mother whose child attends J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School and recently came home with head lice. The school says not many were affected.

by NANCY RIVARD

What comes to mind when you first hear these two words—Head Lice! Automatically you scalp tingles. Your hand reaches for you head. Your fingers, with a mind of their own, start to scratch. Your mouth, not one to be left out of the picture, opens. But, what can you say? Somebody might hear! You certainly can't let anyone know! Yet embarrassment overpowers you and your face flushes with a scarlet glow. Now you know for sure that the whole world knows too. Your children have head lice!

This is precisely how I reacted the first time. The only thoughts I had were "get rid of it", and "I don't want that in my house". My next and even greater concern was that someone, anyone, would find out. But kids will be kids, and my kids seem to have an extra special knack of knowing what to say when it would embarrass me the most.

My reactions from the first time have changed greatly in the last year. No longer to I treat head lice as a dirty word. Oh yes, I still turn scarlet and start to scratch, but I am no longer an unformed scratcher.

Last year my family and I lived in London. My daughter was sent home from school nine times with head lice. Yes, NINE times. "How can this be?"

Writing this, I can just imagine your reactions. No, we didn't live in the slums, and no, the classes were not held in garbage cans. "But how", you ask, "is that possible?"

At first I thought, Okay, I should have expected this. I'll clean it up and that will be that. The second, third, fourth, and fifth time I was simply dumfounded. How could this be so rampant? With the school keeping an eye on it, how could things get this far? By the eighth time I was absolutely furious. I was completely fed up with it all—the aggravation, frustration, the house being turned upside down every few weeks, and the time being missed at school.

Four people lived in our house. One of my children went to a different school, and came home once with it. No one else had it. There had to be a problem at my daughter's school.

I decided "That's it, I'm going to put a stop to this, right now". I marched into the principal's office and blurted out "What is going on here? I want an end to this, and I want it now!" He looked up at me, with a look of more than mild irritation, and stated, "We are doing all that we can. It's up to the parents to clean up their children and not send them back to school until they are free of head lice. All we can do is send them back to school until they are free of head lice. All we can do is send the child home, inform the parents on the proper procedure for ridding their child of the head lice, and check the child when he or she comes back to school. If the child is still infested, he or she is sent home again.

What parents need to know

The problem largely revolves around parents not knowing the "hows and whats" about cleaning it up. Some parents will not believe their children could have this problem. So they don't do anything about it. The problem also relates to the fact that the public is not well enough informed. Head lice is not a health hazard. Nor is it a dirty word. It is a nuisance. One that should be nipped in the nit. I teasingly told my daughter that she learned more in Grade 1 about head lice than she did about reading, printing, and math. But by the ninth time I was becoming a well-informed parent. This time the pharmacist told me about a cream rinse that kills not only the adult lice but the nits (eggs) as well. It has been a godsend. We actually completed what was left of the school year without any more incidents.

The facts shared

I would like to share with you the many facts about head lice which I have learned. The school year is once again upon us. The threat of head lice hangs literally over our heads. School children are more likely to get head lice because they are grouped together more often than adults. Perhaps this advice can help to keep it under control.

Head lice are parasites. They are tiny, wingless insects with flattened bodies. They live mostly in the hair and on the head. Favoured spots are behind the ears and at the nape of the neck. They also like eyebrows, eyelashes, and beards. The adults are only about 3mm (1/8 inch) long. Not only are they tiny, their bodies colour changes to match the colour of the hair to which they have attached themselves. This makes them almost impossible to detect.

Head lice cling to the hair by means of six hook-like claws. They cannot be shaken off. They puncture the scalp with their teeth in order to suck blood for nourishment. This irritates the skin and makes the scalp itchy.

The nits, or eggs, are even smaller. They are no bigger than half the size of a pin head. They live very close to the skin and are firmly attached to the hair shafts by means of a cement-like substance. Nits are oval-shaped, opaque and yellowish-white in colour, and are often mistaken for dandruff. Unlike dandruff, nits can't be flicked away.

Head lice can't always be seen by the naked eye. The first and most pronounced sign is persistent itching and scratching. Other suspicious signs include scratch marks, or what appears to be a rash on the neck and scalp. A magnifying glass would be useful in detecting the louse. Nits are easier to notice. You can be sure if you have nits then the adults are there, busy at work on your scalp.

'Head lice multiply quickly and spread easily. It's important to do something as quickly as possible.'

Once the presence of head lice has been confirmed, immediate action should be taken. Unchecked, head lice spread with amazing speed. The sooner the treatment begins, the less likelihood there is of passing head lice on to others. Head lice are transmitted directly, through head to head contact, and indirectly through personal items and clothing. Both must be treated.

In trying to rid yourself of lice, you must look at all the angles. First, your hair must be treated with a special shampoo or cream rinse. Don't be too embarrassed to ask your pharmacist, doctor, or health unit about everything and anything you want to know.

You also need a special fine-tooth comb to comb the nits out of your hair. Rinsing you hair with vinegar diluted in water makes the nits easier to remove. Combs and brushes should be cleaned to remove stray hairs, and then disinfected either by using head lice shampoo or a Lysol solution.

Hair should be checked and combed often, until all nits are gone. And, it should be checked regularly in case of new infestation. This is a tedious process but if it is not done properly the problem may persist.

In extreme cases of head lice where they have been unannounced for a while, there are extra precautions to take. There are sprays and powders on the market for your carpets, upholstery, and even your pets. Head lice multiply quickly and spread easily. It's important to do something about them as quickly as possible.

Remember...

Here are some important things to remember when dealing with head lice:

1. Lack of cleanliness does not cause head lice. It has been noted that head lice prefer clean scalps. They know no barriers of age, sex, race, or social class.
2. Examine your child's head at regular intervals. School days make a perfect time for lice to go head hopping, but remember, they also enjoy a day at the park, or a week at camp.
3. Notify the school if lice are present immediately. The longer the delay, the bigger the problem.
4. Ensure that your children understand that they should never trade, swap, or loan any personal items such as: hats, scarfs, combs, barrettes, headbands, etc. This will lessen the chances of coming in contact with head lice.
5. It's not necessary to shave the head to get rid of lice, and keeping hair short is not a guarantee of avoiding them.
6. Head lice won't kill. They don't carry typhus, trench fever, or relapsing fever. They are a real nuisance. They're unpleasant to have and bothersome to get rid of. Don't be alarmed by them. BE PREPARED FOR THEM.

THIS WEEK

Week needs youthful effort

LEGION NEWS

by Mabel Brannigan

Legion Week was launched on September 17 by sharing and enjoying a family service with Rev. John Phillips and congregations of St. George's Anglican church. Despite the heavy recent schedule of the Haliburton legion Pipe Band, several members were on hand for the parade, which consisted for mostly veterans, and of course, the Ladies auxiliary. We were pleased to see Mrs. Allaire and four of the 1129 cadets. This helped to offset the very noticeable absence of many younger Legionnaires. We extend a thank you to Comrade Jim Tice for the early morning coffee, directing traffic and other courtesies which meant a lot to the veterans and their wives, and others who attended. As our total membership climbs to an all-time high, every Legionnaire, especially younger members, should be asking "What is my contribution to Legion Week?" If it is nothing, then we have made a great contribution to Legion Week? If it is nothing, then we have made a great contribution to the death of the Legion as our veterans also die. Legion Week will end on September 24 with our band and a bus load of members attending the District Drumhead service in Bancroft.

District seminars held at Branch 67 on Monday night were well attended by Haliburton members and proved to be very informative.

Elsie Massey is getting ready for a turkey and steak roll on September 23 at 2:00 PM, in the clubroom. Be sure you are there to get your Thanksgiving turkey.

Office renovations are nearly finished. The rear section has been converted to an executive suite for the Manager, and also includes facilities for the newly installed computer system. The front section includes facilities for the office and Branch secretaries, Branch chairmen and the president.

The general body voted to continue the Bluegrass Festival for another year. This festival has been used as a tool to develop Glebe Park. It will continue only as long as a profit can be made, but from the affirmative votes at the general meeting, it is evident that there will be plenty of volunteers for next year at least.

The Ladies Auxiliary is holding its last flea market for the season on October 7, Thanksgiving weekend. Let's all help them to make this one their biggest and best.

Unfortunately, all news from your Branch is not pleasant. Last week saw two large Legion funerals. Comrade Jimmie Hobson was a past Sgt.-at-Arms and executive member. Our deepest sympathy is extended to his wife, Joan. Since Joan is also a key member of Branch 129 Ladies Auxiliary, there was also a large L.A. representation at the Legion service. Sympathy is also extended to the family of Comrade Becky MacLean of the Ladies Auxiliary. We fondly remember Becky for her work at the flea markets and as a willing participant in Branch activities. The Ladies catered a lovely luncheon for the families after both public funeral services.

The next general meeting will be on Thursday evening on October 5, at 8:00 o'clock. Appreciation Nights, necessarily cancelled last month, is expected to be held in the clubroom on October 14. It is merely a thank you to the hard working Branch and L.A. volunteers, who over the past year have made our Legion so successful.

Dancers pair up after 50 years

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Winnifred Barnum

Thursday was tea-party day and Kinmount Baptist Church brought a delicious luncheon. The ladies were assisted by two gentlemen. After the luncheon, Pastor Don Payne of Kinmount entertained us by playing the mouthorgan, and Doris played the piano. They played a few favourite hymns. Pastor Don Wilkinson closed by a prayer. The Residents thank them kindly.

Tom McAllister called bingo for us Thursday evening. This was his last night to call bingo because the Kinsmen will be starting again now that holiday season is over. We have enjoyed Tom coming during the summer as we thank him sincerely.

As usual Friday afternoon we have happy hour. For entertainment, Freddie Cooper played the accordion and Sinc Russell played the banjo and Doris the piano. Fred and Sinc hadn't played together since 1936. Everyone enjoyed them and will be happy to have them whenever they can come. Ruby Schmedt and Bill Moore danced a few dances for us. They have known each other all their lives, but had not danced together since 1936 till Friday. Ruby also step danced. Thank you all, we appreciate you coming.

Ed and Peggy Pettinger were here to visit Peggy's sister Maizie McIntosh Friday.

Saturday Sept. 9, 1989, was a very special occasion. Mrs. Isabella Eastman celebrated her one-hundredth birthday. The auditorium was nicely decorated and her son Doug Eastman brought her in, in a wheelchair decorated beautifully with a white umbrella and streamers. She was seated at a table especially for her. Many pictures were taken.

A friendly chat: This huge Wrinkles puppet seems to be sharing a conversation with Max Strang, left, and Arthur Brunton, right, when the three of them enjoyed the opening of the Studio Tour show at the Rails' End Gallery on Saturday night. The tour is September 30 and October 1 and the show is an over-view of artisans' work.

St. Catharines a popular spot for residents

CARNARVON NEWS

by Ann McKay

Here are some of the happenings of the past three weeks, which I apologize for not sending in earlier.

The first fall meeting of the U.C.W. was a luncheon meeting held at the home of Mrs. Sinclair Russell.

Donna and Debby Thomas are back in University in Peterborough. Michelle Harrison is finishing her education in St. Catharines.

Garth and Helen Windsor have returned from a trip to B.C. in their motorhome. They visited with their son and family in Kelowna before coming home through the U.S.A.

Dave and Mary Bell were in St. Catharines for a weekend, where they attended the wedding anniversary of her parents. This past weekend they attended the Blue Jays game at the Sky Dome, Toronto.

On Sept. 4, I was unfortunate in losing my beloved mother who passed away quietly in her sleep in her 94th year. Owing to health problems I was unable to attend her funeral in England.

Mrs. Thelma Scott of Sault Ste. Marie spent a few days visiting her sisters, Mrs. Stan Archer and Joyce Austin.

Folks dropping in recently with us were David Grown of Hamilton, Tom Bennett of Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hale of Mississauga and Mr. and Mrs. Ken McKay and family of Peterborough.

Greg Moore McKay who has worked for a few years at Carnarvon Lumber, has moved to St. Catharines and has rented out his home here for the length of time he will be employed there.

About 40 ladies gathered at the C.E. Building on Sunday afternoon to honour Suzanne Penney, daughter of Cecil and Yvonne, with a bridal shower. Many lovely and useful gifts were presented before a delicious lunch was served. The shower was organized by her Aunt, Claire Harrison. Suzanne will be married Oct. 14 to Tom Roberts of Haliburton in the Carnarvon Church.

Max and I spent four days last week with Ross and Jean Misener in Bonfield in the North Bay Area.

On Sunday morning the sermon was taken by guest speaker, Beth Zwecher from Four Cast pointed out the help needed by the families of Alcoholics through Al-Anon and Al-Ateen.

of her and her family. Isabella was presented with several plaques. Bern Berry presented one from the County, Gary McKnight, presented one from Bill Scott MP Victoria/Haliburton, another from John Eakins MPP Victoria/Haliburton and Good wishes cards. A delicious lunch was served to her relatives and friends. She was presented with a lovely birthday cake have 100 lighted candles. Happy birthday and good health.

Friday, Sept. 8. Ada Turrall had her sister Lily and husband Bill from Gravenhurst to visit her and on Monday Sept. 11, Mary and Austin Mills from Richmond Hill, very old friends of Ada. Friday Sept. 8, my son and wife (Terry and Norma) and my grandson Kevin's wife Claudia had dinner with me.

The Lion's Club of Minden sold tickets during the summer and held the draw on the village green Saturday Sept. 9, 1989 at 2 o'clock. Winners were: 1st prize: $1,000 R. Lucas, Oshawa, drawn by Reeve Ray Moore; 2nd prize: $750.00 won by John White of West Hill, drawn by Deputy Reeve Bern Berry; 3rd prize: $500.00 won by Red Hart, Minden, drawn by Acting Administrator and County Clerk Gary McKnight; 4th prize: $250.00 won by Mary Tweedle of Orillia, drawn by Gerry Jordan of Highland Jewellery and China Shop; 5th prize: $100.00 won by Helen Donaldson of Minden drawn by Times publisher Jack Brezina. Proceeds from the draw with be presented to acting administrator Gary McKnight for the Hyland Crest Bus Fund on Friday September 15, 1989. The Residents of Hyland Crest Senior Citizens Home sincerely thank you for this generous gift and for all the hard work to make this project such a success.

Monday morning in the crafts room, a Resident's Council meeting was held at which several problems were discussed and decided upon to improve our home.

Monday evening Ena Marion and her husband showed three films in the auditorium: The Railroaders, Highway One, and The Florida Everglades. We enjoyed them and thank you for using your time to entertain us.

Congratulations to Gladys Kirkpatrick on her birthday Sept. 10. Bill Moore on his birthday Sept. 11, and Nancy Carefoot on her birthday on Sept. 12. Happy Birthday to all.

Pastor Fast of Gospel Church Minden held the Tuesday morning Chapel Service.

Tuesday afternoon Doris and Linda took some of the Residents for a bus ride to Birch Tree Corners, Lochlin, Donald, Haliburton and Gooderham by the Buckhorn Road, back to Haliburton and home via Highway 121. It was a beautiful day and we all enjoyed it.

Ada Lewis is still in Peterborough hospital. Lillian James is also in Peterborough having treatment on her eyes. We wish them a speedy recovery.

Harold and Wendy Kirkpatrick and Wendy's sister who just returned from England were here to see Harold's mother, Gladys Kirkpatrick. Grace Sipes, Tom Kirkpatrick, his wife and daughter were here Sunday to see Gladys on her birthday.

Last week Dora Dawson had Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Edwards from Scarborough to visit her.

Lillian James is back from Peterborough and Alice Rivers has returned from Oshawa. We are glad to see them both home.

Music highlights Region 6 Rally

Region 6 Rally, with the theme, "One Day at a Time" was held in Lochlin United Church on Wednesday, September 13, 1989. Between 60 and 70 ladies registered. With Glenna Beckham at the piano and Doreen Bullied leading, a sing-song was enjoyed prior to the Call to Worship by Chairperson, Pat Burke. Shirley Hill of Lochlin welcomed everyone to the church. Eleanor Holmes and Beulah Tyler of Haliburton were in charge of Devotions. The theme song, "One Day at a Time", was sung, followed by prayer and scripture taken from Matthew 6: 25-34. A meditation on the theme and hymn, "Take Time to be Holy," concluded the Worship. The Offering was received and dedicated by Vaneita Pickens and Lorna Hicks of Gooderham. Mrs. Evelyn Stata extended a cordial invitation for the 1990 Rally to be held at Maple Lake.

The minutes of the 1988 Rally were read. The Roll Call followed, with each group standing, and a report of a special highlight was given. Everyone stood and repeated the U.C.W. Purpose, in unison. Special music by a trio, Lillian Mann, Shirley Colliss, and Lorna Roland of Minden, was enjoyed.

Joyce Jones brought greetings and introduced the Lindsay Presbyterian officers. She drew attention to the dangers of copying music without first receiving copyright approval. She shared some letters and mentioned a workshop at Marmora on Nov. 4 re: the correct way to compose a petition. A mini workshop will be held at the October Executive on the studybook, "Canada's Cultural Mosaic". The mid-week event will be at Bobcaygeon on Nov. 1 and 2. Orlee Wells, nominations, told of a need for a Fair Booth Co-ordinator and a Youth Convener. Carol Thompson, 1st. vice-president, brought greetings as did Jean Gorrill, 2nd. vice-president. Jean as Corresponding Secretary offered again to send cards to anyone and expressed her thanks for letters she had received during the time of grief she has experienced. Jean also brought regrets from Doreen McAlpine who has been ill. Florence Harrison

Region 6 rally

Continued from page 24 noted the M and S is in need of donations over and above our allocations. Olive Nye referred to two letters she had distributed regarding palliative care and abused women. Connie Grundy, Stewardship, stressed the need for increased donations to M and S.

Olive Rodgers, Press and Publicity, brought greetings and expressed regrets from Isabel Wessell, Archivist. It was reported that Vina Neal, in charge of In Memoriam, is only in fair health. Joyce Jones brought regrets from Joyce Junkin and displayed the book of skits. Mary Winterbottom, A.D.A., stressed the need for parents to talk with their children, not at them, and that love and compassion surpass a room full of toys. Shirley Reesor shared several books that would be available during the lunch hour, in the book display. Grace was sung, and lunch was served by the Lochlin ladies. Another sing-song under the direction of the Carnarvon ladies was enjoyed, followed by prayer by Pat Bradbury of Minden.

Isabel Saunders of Ingoldsby, upon placing flowers on a stand, read the names of those who had died in the past year, followed by prayer. Mildred Hill of Lochlin introduced the speaker, Mrs. Wendy Ellis. Mrs. Ellis' husband teaches in Minden as an exchange teacher from Australia. Mrs. Ellis in a very pleasant manner contributed to the theme, "Expect the Unexpected". Each day little things come up and we should consider that God's hand is at work in some way, she said. With scriptural references she recalled how the disciples dealt with the unexpected. We were encouraged to hear God's call through scripture and with God's help we can cope with the unexpected. Maurine Finlay, of Wilberforce-Tory Hill, thanked Mrs. Ellis and presented her with a gift. Pat Burke expressed appreciation to all who had contributed to this day and a special thanks to her capable secretary, Iola Hicks. Shirley Hill added her thanks and wished everyone a safe trip home.

After singing "The Day Thou Gavest", the printed benediction was read in unison, thus concluding the day.

IN MEMORIAM

IN LOVING MEMORY of a Dear Husband and Father, Earl Cain, who passed away September 25, 1985.

Fond are the ties that are broken, Dear is the one who is gone, In memory we shall keep him As long as the years roll on. As we loved him, so we miss him. In our memory he is dear Loved, remembered, longed for always, Bringing many a silent tear. "In silence we remember."

Always remembered by wife Celia and sons William, Donald, Clayton and Robert.
